Senate Crushes Tax Delay Move In First Test Vote

Vandenberg Leads Fight Against Levies on Big Fortunes.

Minority Report Assails Measure

Postponement of Action Is Defeated by 55-19.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's proposed taxes on bigness and wealth rode through a tempest of Republican opposition yesterday to their first Senate test—an overwhelming 55-to-19 refusal to postpone enactment until next session.

The first ballot, offering a fair barometer of how the final vote may go, came on a motion by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to sidetrack the bill by sending it back to the committee.

"I want to test the sense of the Senate as to whether or not it is the course of wisdom to wait until next winter and do a real job, when we are in the presence of all the essential facts," Vandenberg told the Senate.

Minority Report Filed.

He assailed the Senate Finance Committee's $250,000,000 wealth-taxing measure as "an ill-timed and ill-starred" bill—a "tinfoil measure which snipes inconclusively at wealth, but which will neither produce revenue commensurate with our spendings nor achieve any useful social purpose."

The motion was crushed, and leaders drove forward toward possible passage tomorrow or Saturday. Forty-six Democrats, 7 liberal Republicans, 1 Progressive and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted "No." Eight conservative Democrats united with 11 Republicans in support of the motion.

Earlier in the day, the Finance Committee had made public an explanatory report on the bill by the committee majority, followed by a vigorous dissenting report signed by Senators Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, and Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware (Republicans).

"We object strenuously to every provision in the bill as it passed the House, to each amendment proposing imposition of taxes recommended by the majority of this committee, and to the enactment of any bill at the present time," read the minority opinion.

The Metcalf-Hastings report set forth three major objections to the legislation and enumerated five "substitute recommendations," leading off with the demand: "Adjourn Congress immediately."

Instead of the bill's routine title, the minority proposed the following as more "accurate":

"A bill to confiscate property; to discourage business and prevent its expansion; to destroy incentive and discriminate against ability, brain, ambition and enterprise; to create greater inequalities in the inequitable distribution of existing tax burdens; to promote unemployment and to obstruct recovery; to jeopardize the financial position of the Government, and for other improper purposes."

Opposition Bitter.

All day long a steady beat of Republican opposition pounded through the chamber, with a few Democratic raps sandwiched in. Outstanding among the latter was another demand by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, that Congress adjourn and go home. Copeland echoed the views of Vandenberg that the proposed taxes would discourage business and serve no useful purpose.

Copeland said the bill would raise only a "teaspoonful" of revenues. Taking issue with various tax proposals in the bill, he said, as much as he was opposed to the inheritance taxes favored by the President and approved by the House, he favored these to the new estate taxes proposed by the Finance Committee.

Declaring that no revenue measure has ever been reported "so universally unsatisfactory as the bill now under consideration," Senator Hastings pitched into the debate with the assertion it was "conceived in political intrigue" and

Ethiopia Asks League to End Ban on Arms

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Ethiopia yesterday appealed to the League of Nations to have arms embargoes lifted, asking League Council if it would assume responsibility for threatened "massacre" of her people.

Mussolini issued a call for reservists of 1911, 1913 and 1914, increasing his army by several thousand. Press attacks continued against British newspaper attitudes.

Delegates to the Paris Mediation Conference held their first meeting, Britain and France proposing extraterritorial rights to Italy.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 14.—Ethiopia dispatched a fervent appeal to the League of Nations today to have many nations remove an arms embargo against her, asserting otherwise she faced "massacre" by Italy. The protest called Italy "all powerful" and Ethiopia "weak and pacific."

"Notwithstanding the resumption of arbitration procedure in conformity with the council's decision on August 3," said the appeal, "the royal Italian government is continuing to send troops and ammunition into Eastern Africa. It is ceaselessly manufacturing arms and implements of war with the solemnly avowed intention of using them against the Ethiopian empire.

"There is no manufacture in Ethiopia * * * of arms or munitions of war. The imperial Ethiopian government today finds it absolutely impossible to obtain means of defense outside its own frontier. Wherever it attempts to obtain them it meets with prohibitions of exports and embargoes.

"Is that real neutrality? Is it just? Will the council remain unmoved in the face of this situation which is growing steadily worse? Will it allow this unequal combat to continue between two members of the League of Nations, one of which is all powerful and in a position to employ, and declares it is employing, all its resources in preparing for aggression, while the other, weak and pacific and mindful of its international undertaking, is deprived of means of organizing the defense of its territory and its very existence, both of which are threatened?

"Will the council assume the responsibility in the eyes of the world for allowing these preparations to continue unchecked for the massacre of a people which constitute a menace to none?"

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 14.—The danger of war in Africa which is disturbing Europe was frankly faced today in an Anglo-French curtain-raiser to the three-power conversations.

Premier Pierre Laval and Anthony Eden of Great Britain agreed, officials said, that war between Italy and Ethiopia, both members of the League of Nations, would be likely to annul efforts for a European peace pact system. They left unsaid their fears of what might happen to Europe.

Hope of averting a conflict is slight, said experts studying the problem, but Laval was known to be counting upon the danger of their situation as a strong factor in inducing all parties to moderate their positions.

[The United Press said that France and Britain proposed to grant Italy colonizing rights in thinly inhabited territories in upper Ethiopia in a new formula to avert war. If it is rejected by

This is the kind of weather during which a furnace is the last thing most of us would think of. Yet at least three foresighted Washingtonians called at the home of Mr. John Free at 3035 Military road to buy the furnace he had advertised for sale in the Classified Columns of The Post.

Which proved again that if you have something for sale, the swiftest, surest, cheapest way to find a buyer is through The Post's Classified Ad Columns.

World War Feared Near By Snowden

Briton Appeals to U. S. to Apply Kellogg Pact to African Crisis.

British, French Policy Attacked as Playing Into Italy's Hands.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tilford, Surrey, England, Aug. 14. Philip Snowden, former chancellor of the exchequer, broke a lifetime rule tonight and gave an interview in which he said Europe is on the brink of a new world war "too terrible to contemplate."

Viscount Snowden appealed to America to bring its influence to bear to help prevent a catastrophic clash of nations.

"Mussolini has, for all practical purposes, already declared war," the former government leader declared. "He has been massing troops on the borders of Ethiopia for months and is waiting only for suitable conditions to launch an attack.

"He Will Not Stop."

"His aim and ambition will not stop short with the conquest of Ethiopia. If successful in this enterprise, his next move will be to absorb Austria. That attempt will bring Germany into war and as European nations are now bound together with innumerable pacts and treaties, a general war would be inevitable."

The 71-year-old Laborite, once Ramsay MacDonald's great friend and ally and now his bitterest enemy, attacked what he termed the impotent policy of Britain and France as "playing into the hands of Italy."

He declared the British government has been afraid to take a strong line with Italy and predicted the present Paris tri-power conference will end in "nothing but talk."

Kellogg Pact Cited.

The United States, he asserted, bears an honor-bound responsibility to the Briand-Kellogg pact.

"We in Britain were encouraged by the courageous statement made recently by Mr. Kellogg to the hope that the influence of America will be brought to bear in the present crisis.

"Not only is the covenant of the League but the Kellogg pact at stake and if Mussolini is allowed to plunge into war without restraint, then that pact, as well as the League covenant, becomes a scrap of paper and all safeguards for enforcing international law and international morality will have gone by the board."

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 14.—David Lloyd George charged today that Great Britain, France and Italy have "completely destroyed" the power of the League of Nations and were preparing "to deliver" Ethiopia to Italy.

In an address to the National Trade Union Club on the current tri-power conference in Paris, the World War premier asked:

Ethiopia Ruled Out.

"What are they discussing? Are they discussing how they are to prevent Mussolini from destroying the independence of a friendly power, which is a member of the League?

"That is not it at all, they are just discussing what measure of economic, strategic and political control can be given to Italy without war. How they can deliver Ethiopia on the cheap to Italy—that is the quesiton being discussed."

Ethiopia, he continued, "the very county whose integrity and independence was challenged, has been ruled out from the conference that

St. Louis.

Insurrection at the Bar.

"TABLES FOR LADIES"—an inobtrusive sign lettered on the door of most taverns—became the law for feminine drinkers, barred from the bars by the city excise commissioner.

Without the anticipated "mass demonstrations," expected from modern Carrie Nations in reverse, the city placed in effect its new rule that ladies who drink must drink at tables, or at home. From this day, St. Louis bars are "for men only."

In brief, the rule is that no woman shall stand before the mahogany and order "one with seltzer." In theory it is to "improve the moral tone of the city." In fact it may cause trouble, the Associated Press reports, but the latter did not materialize in the crowded matinee tap rooms.

Only one pioneer invaded the prominent bars in protest and she retreated rapidly. The thirsty lass marched into a hotel tap room, draped a foot on the bar and commanded "draw one." A scornful bartender said "no" and she retreated, still thirsty. Thus, the first rebellion was put down.

"They tell me," said Thomas Anderson, excise commissioner, from the safety of his office, "that there may be 'mass demonstrations' and the like, sort of a barroom Bunker Hill affair from modern 'insurrectionettes.' If that be the case, let them come. It is the owners who must face the music. Their licenses can be revoked for violations."

Women and bars, when joined together, make neither for peace nor dignity, he avers.

But to the bartender goes the burden of enforcement.

Charlie, the No. 1 man at Barry's, hadn't encountered the problem yet, but he had his arguments ready.

"I'll just tell them," he rehearsed before the back bar, "that the law is 'no women at the bar' and that the law is the law and that they won't be served. I'll direct them to the tables—but if they won't move what's a fellow going to do?"

Meanwhile, the boys who specialize in "26 oz. for a dime" down near the Mississippi river front chuckled in their beer at their uptown brothers.

"The gals," they explained, "don't bother us none."

The reason for this strange offer, it developed, is that Mrs. Cordes wants to return to her native Ireland before her mother dies and they have been unable to raise the money.

Col. Knox-for-President Boom Inaugurated in New Hampshire

By the Associated Press.

Hampton Beach, N. H., Aug. 14. New Hampshire Republicans today launched a boom for the nomination of Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, as the party's candidate for President in 1936.

In turn, they heard Col. Knox denounce the Roosevelt Administration for "repudiation" of its 1932 platform pledges and urge adoption by the Republican Party of six "repudiate" planks of the Democratic platform for its own in the next campaign.

Before a gathering of party leaders, announced as an "outing" of the Rockingham County Republican Club, speakers headed by Gov. H. Styles Bridges and George H. Moses, former United States Senator from New Hampshire, set the Knox boom rolling.

'I believe he may be assured of the active support of the New Hampshire delegation," Gov. Bridges said.

"We'll be lucky if the Republican candidate sits with us here today," Moses said.

The field, however, was left open to other candidates in the New Hampshire presidential primary next March, the first to be held in any of the States. Bridges urged that the party send an unpledged delegation to the national convention, a stand Moses also has taken and which was indorsed by Knox in his speech.

Introduced by P. R. Chadwick, president of the Rockingham County Club, as the "next President of the United States," Knox expressed his appreciation and launched into a criticism of President Roosevelt's Administration.

He submitted his planks for the Republican platform, which he said represented "the utter repudiation by Roosevelt and his New Deal Administration of sacred promises made, upon the basis of which he procured his election."

These he listed as:

An immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures.

Maintenance of the national credit by a Federal budget annually balanced.

A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.

Unemployment and old-age insurance under State laws.

Strict and impartial enforcement of the antitrust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices.

Opposition to the unsound policy of restricting agricultural production.

U. S. Buying Fails to Halt Silver Slump

N. Y. Price Falls to 65¾ as 25,500,000 Ounces Are Purchased.

Morgenthau Hits Back as Senators Hint Inquiry Into Policy.

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau last night answered a senatorial threat to investigate the Government's silver purchase policy by revealing that during the day the Treasury had bought 25,500,000 ounces of silver, or more than is produced in America in a year. The price paid was not disclosed.

The disclosure came in the face of a drop of 1⅝ cents an ounce in the New York silver price which had led Senators to criticize the Treasury for "lack of enthusiasm" in fulfilling the silver purchase program enacted by Congress last year.

Congress specified that the Treasury should buy silver until one-third of its monetary stocks are in that metal or until the price reached $1.29 an ounce. Following that act the price rose to 81 cents an ounce last April, but since then fell back to 67¾ cents where it stayed almost without change since July 12. Yesterday it declined ⅝ cent an ounce and today broke more sharply.

Threat of Inquiry.

Senators following the silver policy accused the Government of failing to make sufficient purchases to increase the price after it reached 81 cents and of appearing to buy only nominal amounts during recent weeks when the price was static. Treasury purchases ordinarily are secret in the interest of preventing undue speculation.

After today's drop in price, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, announced he would attempt to get an investigation of the Government's silver actions.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said:

"The Treasury apparently let the price down so that it could buy cheaply. That amounts to manipulating the price up and down on the market and fails to conform to the object of the silver act, which really was to get the price up and stabilize it."

McCarran said he would call up for a vote tomorrow in the Senate his amendment to the general tax bill which is designed to repeal the 50 per cent profit tax on silver transactions. The repeal would in effect restore an open silver market in the United States.

Thomas Scores Methods.

Thomas has complained that while the Treasury may be trying to buy silver cheaply, the policy missed the main point of the silver purchase act, which was to increase the price. He and his colleagues contend that the drop from 81 cents in the spring to around 66 cents now is a graphic demonstration of the shortcoming of the policy.

Purchases in proportion to today's orders, which were bought chiefly from London and New York, will be continued, Mr. Morgenthau said. He denied that the Treasury had eased on purchases in the last few days, as had been charged. Today's purchases, he said, were by far the largest in a single day since the present silver program was inaugurated.

Mr. Morgenthau said he didn't know what effect the purchases would have on the market. When asked if he knew approximately how much monetary silver now is in circulation outside official holdings, he replied:

"Considerably less than there was."

Wide Effects Noted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—The second successive reduction in world silver prices today after a long period of steadiness brought prices for the white metal to the lowest levels since April 11 and had far-reaching repercussions in the foreign exchange market.

In New York the price of imported silver for domestic commercial use was lowered 1⅛ cents, to 65¾ cents, the first change since July 15, following a reduction earlier in London of ¾ of a penny, to 29 3-16 pence, or 65.46 cents.

Silver market experts saw the weakening in international prices for the metal as mirroring the uncertainties of foreign speculators, who were no longer confident that they could "ride along" on a tide of rising prices caused by U. S. Treasury buying.

Speculators 'Triumph.'

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 14.—The Evening Star said silver speculators this afternoon routed the United States Government and caused a slump of three-fourths of a pence in the price of silver, bringing it down to 29 3-16 shillings on a weak market.

The Star says the United States Government has been the only recent buyer of silver and when it permitted the price to fall slightly yesterday speculators began pouring in selling orders.

House Rules Chairman Defies Upper Body in Hunt for Magnat.

Utility Head's Aid Is Cited to Appear

Action Today May Seek to Keep Witness for Lower Branch.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate agent seeking to serve a contempt citation on Howard C. Hopson, head of the Associated Gas & Electric Co., requiring him to appear before the Senate today, was defied last night by Chairman John J. O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, who contended Hopson was in custody of the House committee.

The unlooked-for development came when Representative O'Connor encountered Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, in the Shoreham Hotel after Jurney had hunted the missing utilities head most of the evenin gin Washington hotels.

"Do you know where Hopson is?" Jurney asked hopefully.

Representative O'Connor declared, "Hopson is in my custody, and the Senat ewon't get him under any consideration."

House Seeks to Keep Him.

He also declared a resolution would be offered in the House today, calling for formal delivery of Hopson into the hands of the House sergeant at arms. The move is believed designed to strengthen the House committee's hold on the long-sought witness, who is expected to continue before that group today.

O'Connor's committee and a rival Senate lobby investigating committee headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, have been fighting over Hopson for two days.

Earlier in the day Hopson and his attorney, W. A. Hill, of Boston, were cited for contempt after they had failed to appear before the Senate lobby committee on a forthwith summons. They were ordered brought before the bar of the Senate today to show cause why they should not be punished.

An hour and a half later the citation was served on Hill by Jurney, who found the lawyer enjoying a drink in the cocktail lounge of the Mayflower. Hill will appear before the Senate at noon today.

Jurney was still wondering where to look for the elusive Hopson, who escaped process servers for weeks. Jurney was armed with a summons for Hopson, signed by Vice President Garner.

The forthwith subpena was given Hopson at 11:30 a. m. as he stepped from the House caucus room, where he had been testifying in the Rules Committee lobby investigation. When he had failed to appear at 4 p. m., Senator Black, chairman of the Senate committee, asked for the citation. A resolution ordering the pair to appear before the Senate was adopted an hour later without debate and without a record vote.

Hopson, who is reputed to control the Associated Gas & Electric system, big utilities holding company, thus far has successfully avoided answering questions of the Senate committee, although he finally appeared before the House committee. It was revealed yesterday by Hill, who was brought before the Senate committee to explain charges that he interfered with service of a subpena, that Hopson had been summoned by the House committee Friday and kept in hiding until Tuesday. He also revealed that Hopson had been viewing the battlefield at Gettysburg last week while officers were trying to find him at the Shoreham Hotel and at the home of Patrick J. Hurley, near Leesburg, Va.

Off in Taxicab.

No trouble was experienced by Joseph P. McCarthy, Senate subpena server, in presenting the summons to Hopson yesterday. Accompanied by his bodyguard, said to be named Birmingham and to be a New York private detective in the employ of the House committee, Hopson left the House hearing

Roosevelt Signs Security Bill To Benefit 30 Million Citizens

President Uses Several Pens to Affix Signature to New Deal's Most Historic Act at Impressive White House Ceremony; Co-Authors Pleased.

By Franklin Waltman, Jr.

Declaring that a hope of many years' standing was in large part being fulfilled, President Roosevelt yesterday set into motion a momentous governmental experiment designed to improve the Nation's social and economic conditions when he signed the social security bill.

Although of a purely routine and expected nature, the President's approval of the social security legislation was one of those governmental acts that will become more than a footnote in American history. Its importance cannot be exaggerated because in providing old-age health pensions and unemployment insurance this legislation eventually will affect the lives of every man, woman and child in the country.

The President made the signing of the bill an occasion for a ceremony in the Cabinet Room, from which, unfortunately, the press was barred without any explanation. Present, however, were those who sponsored the bill on Capitol Hill, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and a large group of still and motion picture cameramen.

As the cameras recorded the scene for the country and posterity, the President rapidly used a number of pens in affixing his name to the bill, making it a law. How many pens he used is not known, but many were used because of numerous requests for souvenirs of the occasion.

Co-Authors Pleased.

Particularly pleased among the group that looked on were Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, and Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Marland, who were authors of the bill and by it fulfilled a dream of many years. Both have been foremost in the sponsorship of social legislation, but this bill was their greatest achievement.

As he finished signing the bill, the President delivered a brief address to those present in which he asserted that the measure represented "a corner stone in a struc-

AAA Reverses Crop Cut Plan As Prices Soar

Forming Plan to Increase Production of Hogs as Pork Hits $29.50.

As fresh pork prices at Chicago jumped another $1 a hundred pounds, setting a new high of $29.50, it became evident here yesterday that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and AAA officials had become so concerned about the high cost of food that they were turning their crop-reduction program into an "increase-the-production" plan.

The first concrete action in this direction was taken yesterday when it was announced that 5,200,000 acres would be returned to wheat production next year. This is a reversal of the policy announced on July 31, two weeks ago.

On that occasion it was announced that wheat farmers would be asked to sign contracts to plant for 1936 not more than 85 per cent of their base acreage. This figure yesterday was revised upward to 95 per cent. The 5,200,000 acres returned to production is 10 per cent of the 52,000,000 acres which may be planted under the AAA contracts.

Roadside Actor Is Drowned At Outing, Two Others Saved

An outing of a group of the Roadside Players ended in tragedy yesterday when Mario Geraci, 21, one of the players and a student of George Washington University, was drowned. Two of his companions were saved.

The group of five went for a day's outing to Freestone Point, Va., about 5 miles below Woodbridge on the Potomac River. In the party were Geraci, Eugene Kressin and William Phillips, also actors, and Jean and Eleanor Smith, 17 and 16, respectively.

The three men, swimming near a sandbar, were swept by the current so that they were unable to return to safety. Seeing their plight the girls screamed for help.

W. M. Hampton, superintendent of the Freestone Gun Club, went to their aid in a boat, and assisted Phillips and Kressin to safety, but was unable to aid Geraci.

Prince William County deputy sheriffs were unable to find the body. The men were dragging the river last night without success.

Geraci was graduated from Roosevelt High School two years ago and has since attended the university.

Hatchet Buried As Davey Talks With President

No Special Ohio Election He Says; Gets 15 Million for State Works.

President Roosevelt and Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio yesterday met, buried the political hatchet by promising "cooperation" between their two administrations in things political, and parted with apparently mutual satisfaction.

Davey, before entering the President's office, announced definitely that he would not call a special election to elect a successor to the late Charles V. Truax, who represented the whole State of Ohio in the House—announcement which relieved the anxiety of some Democrats who feared a test in Ohio at this time.

On leaving the President's office after a conference of almost an hour, Davey smilingly revealed that he had Mr. Roosevelt's written approval of a proposed Ohio public works program to cost between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 to be carried out under the 45 per cent grant—55 per cent loan plan.

There may be no relation whatever between the announcement Davey made before entering the presidential office and the one he made on leaving, but such is politics that the two already have been linked together and undoubtedly will be discussed in the same breath at greater length later on.

Long Is Sarcastic.

Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, on the Senate floor, asserted Davey had rendered a great service to his party by refusing to hold a special election at this time, since, the Kingfish said, the New Deal would be repudiated, as it was in Rhode Island. The Kingfish added, "I hope his basket is well filled at the White House."

More to the point, however, was the remark of George H. Bender, Cleveland Republican, defeated by Truax last year and an avowed candidate now for his seat. Bender asserted that Davey had used "the question of whether to call the special election as a club" over the President.

He recalled the violent quarrel between Davey and Work Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins last spring, and contended that Davey's visit to the White House was "an effort to shake down the Administration."

While these statements were being issued in various places, Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, predicted that the Republicans would capture from 75 to 100 House seats at the next election—not a sufficient number, however to give that party control. The Democrats now have a majority of 215, which would require a shift of 108 seats to be wiped out.

Bolton Seen "Revulsion."

Bolton has been particularly anxious for a test of New Deal sentiment this fall in Ohio. He believes there has been a widespread "revulsion" against the Roosevelt Administration in his home State as well as in other parts of the country.

Ohio's Governor, however, said he had noticed no change in sentiment toward the New Deal since last November's election, when the Democrats swept the State. Davey said if an election were held tomorrow he believed Democratic candidates for Congress would poll overwhelming majorities.

He said he was "not afraid" of an encounter with the Republicans, but that he saw no reason to put the counties of his State to a cost of between $500,000 and $600,000 for holding an election when many of them are in dire financial straits. Moreover, he said that since Truax represented the whole State no congressional district would be without representation through postponement of the election until next year. Democrats in the House, he added, did not need the Democratic vote lost by the death of Truax.

Silent on Mandamus.

As he talked, the Ohio Supreme Court issued an alternative writ of mandamus, according to the Associated Press, requiring Davey to show cause by August 24 why he should not call a special election to fill the Truax vacancy. The suit was brought by Harry C. Armstrong, a Columbus (Ohio) taxpayer.

Informed of the court's action, Davey said he could not discuss it until he saw the legal papers and until he had an opportunity to confer with counsel. He pointed out, however, that the Ohio constitution did not specify a period in which a special election should be held, and if he were ordered by the courts to issue a call, he would designate next May and the following November as the dates for the primary and general elections to fill the Truax seat.

AAA Reverses Order to Slash Wheat Acreage

Forming Plan to Increase Hog Production as Pork Hits $29.50.

statement by Secretary Wallace at his press conference that the AAA had under consideration taking action to increase hog production. He maintained that the present scarcity, which has sent hog prices skyward and made pork a luxury, was due solely to last year's drought and that the AAA reduction program was in no way a contributing factor.

Wallace indicated that plans for increasing hog production may be announced after the AAA amendments now pending before Congress are enacted. He did not indicate the nature of the plan except to outline the future policy of the AAA as one to stabilize food production at the per capita domestic consumption level of the 1920s.

He asserted that the AAA amendments when enacted would transform the farm program from a crop reduction to a crop adjustment basis. These amendments have had a tortuous journey through Congress but the end was in sight yesterday when the House agreed to three of the four remaining points of controversy.

The House substituted its own provisions for the authorization of Works Relief funds for the purchase and retirement of sub-marginal land. Under the House substitute the President may use for retirement of such land whatever sums he deems necessary out of appropriations previously or hereafter made for sub-marginal land uses.

Provisions appropriating $10,000,000 for cattle disease elimination and granting authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to fix potato production quotas were approved by the House. The measure now goes to the Senate for approval of the conference report. Should the Senate accept it as approved by the House the bill will be ready for the President's signature.

The wholesale price of $29.50 a hundred pounds for fresh pork at Chicago was more than 400 per cent greater than it was two years ago. It was then $6.50 a hundred pounds. Fresh pork comprises the choicest cuts, including loin roasts.

Wallace maintains that last year's drought, which diminished corn production, is responsible for the scarcity in hogs and that actually the AAA's 1933 hog-reduction program, by conserving the consumption of corn, helped to alleviate the situation due to the drought.

Prices to Stay Up.

With the drought over and grain production up, it is now asserted by AAA officials that increased hog production can be expected at least during the next two years. But prices will remain high for some months because the Department of Agriculture predicts that hog-slaughter from June 1 to September 1 of this year may be the smallest since 1902.

Increase in the wheat acreage was decided on in order to offset the decrease of 123,000,000 bushels in the crop estimate from July 1 to August 1, it was explained.

"In the light of this sharp decrease in the crop estimate," it was stated, "the AAA considered that a larger volume of production in 1936 would be desirable insurance to both the farmer and the consumer against the contingency of another year of bad wheat weather."

If yields next year are unusually high, it was explained, "adequate powers are contained in the pending amendments to the AAA to meet any situation which might arise." But it was not believed the increased acreage would create any burdensome surplus next year, particularly in view of a smaller world supply of wheat and the damage done to this year's crop by heat and rust. The smaller world supply creates the possibility that the American farmer may again find foreign wheat markets.

NewHampshire Booming Knox For Presidency

Constitution—Knox attacked President Roosevelt's attitude toward legislation of questionable constitutionality and declared that the only safeguard remaining for the defense of American institutions is the Supreme Court.

"Mostly Ebbed."

Drawing an analogy to the tides of Hampton Beach, Moses said the tides of the Republican party "have ebbed and flowed—mostly ebbed" during the last three years, and "some of us have found ourselves stranded on the shores."

The recent Republican victory in the First Rhode Island Congressional District he likened to "the beginning of a great tidal wave."

"I hope after the campaign is over," he concluded, "we can have in the White House a President of whom we can know what he thinks by what he says."

Fastest Airplane To Be Given Tests

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 14.—A new $100,000 airplane, described as the fastest and most expensive land racing plane ever built, was given finishing touches today. The trim craft, expected to do 365 miles an hour, probably will be taken up tomorrow for its first test.

The owner, Howard Hughes, sportsman, film producer and millionaire oil tool manufacturer—personally supervised today's check-up. Friends of Hughes said the young aviation enthusiast will pilot the plane himself in the national air races, August 30.

Details of the fleet speedster have been withheld. Young Hughes several years ago turned to movie production. His most prominent ventures were "Hell's Angels," in which he introduced Jean Harlow to stardom, and "Scarface," one of the first of the gangster pictures, with Paul Muni.

'Must' Coal Bill Autocracy Aid, Group Asserts

Six House Republicans in Report Attack Guffey Measure.

By the Associated Press.

An accusation that President Roosevelt's "must" Guffey coal bill is designed to institute a move toward a "centralized, bureaucratic autocracy under executive control" was made officially last night by a group of House Republicans.

That was the view expressed by six members of the Ways and Means Committee in a report on the bill submitted to the House. It was dropped into the hopper as high New Deal leaders in both House and Senate spread the report that the bill would be jettisoned in an adjournment rush.

Would Allow Rebates.

The bill would set up a new national bituminous coal commission to enforce a wage, hour, trade practice and price-fixing code like that under NRA. A tax would be levied against all coal, but rebates allowed to those operators who abided by the code.

The Republican report said that Congressmen and the President took an oath of office to "defend the Constitution." Therefore, the Republicans argued, "We feel that it is improper for the President and members of Congress to throw upon the courts the whole burden of considering the constitutionality of proposed legislation."

"The duty of members of Congress to 'support and defend' the Constitution will have been performed in connection with this or any other bill only if, after having made up their own minds as to its constitutionality, they vote as their judgment and conscience dictates," the report said.

"In his advocacy of this legislation, the President continues to show his apparent disregard for constitutional limitations and his desire to institute fundamental changes in our governmental system looking to the establishment of a centralized bureaucratic autocracy under executive control.

Sees Court Antagonized.

"These objectives can be reached only by the creation of an unjust and unwarranted antagonism to the Constitution and the Supreme Court to the point where the people would countenance the necessary changes in the fundamental law.

"We will not be put in the position of having helped to arouse such antagonism by forcing upon the latter (court) the entire responsibility for declaring this legislation unconstitutional."

The report was signed by Representatives Treadway, of Massachusetts; Bacharach, of New Jersey; Crowther, of New York; Knutson, of Minnesota; Reed, of New York, and Woodruff, of Michigan. Representative Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, who favors the bill, did not join in the report.

Move Made in Senate To Delay Cotton Tax

By the Associated Press.

While the President's Cabinet textile committee worked on its recommendations for assistance to the cotton textile industry, a resolution to suspend collection of cotton processing taxes pending Supreme Court determination of their validity was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Martin (Republican), Massachusetts.

The resolution provides for payment of processing tax commitments from work relief funds until the issue is decided by the Supreme Court.

Case Workers Advocate Dole, Says M'Carran

Hopkins Accused of "Carpet Bag" Policy By Nevada Senator.

By the Associated Press.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, charged to newsmen last night that case workers in Harry L. Hopkins' relief administration had encouraged families to go on the dole to lengthen their own jobs.

Asserting simultaneously in a formal statement that he expected Hopkins to order payment of prevailing wages on works progress projects, McCarran accused the work relief director of an attitude similar to that of the case workers.

"These workers are the ones who go out and say to a family that was just getting along, 'You should be on relief,'" McCarran said. "They're holding their jobs because they are case workers.

Helps Him Keep Job.

"The more they hold on relief the longer the jobs last. And the longer Mr. Hopkins transports them across State lines, the longer he keeps his job.

"His carpet-bag policy is simply destructive and doesn't lend itself to taking people off relief.

"He's a social worker and we don't expect to receive living conditions from social workers. All Hopkins knows is the CWA and I've been afraid all along that that was what the new program would amount to."

Referring to recent strikes in New York City, Cleveland and Philadelphia against the $19 to $94 WPA wage scale, McCarran said they would be just a "starter." He predicted Hopkins would shortly order revisions "in the spirit of the prevailing wage policy."

Changes Denied.

McCarran said his forecast was made after conferences "with several groups." Works Progress Administration officials were quick to deny that any changes were contemplated.

As McCarran outlined his understanding of the predicted plan, total monthly payments would remain unchanged, but wages would be at the prevailing hourly rate—with a consequent reduction in working time.

"Take a skilled workman rating $85 a month," he said. "If the hourly rate was $1 he'd work 85 hours a month instead of 120 to 140, the way it is now.

"This would keep from knocking down union wages and at the same time permit hiring of more people to carry out the program."

This arrangement was similar to the old Relief Administration work program, now being converted into WPA projects, except that the needy were allowed to work just long enough at prevailing rates to provide for their needs.

Senate Hunting Hopson to Face Contempt Trial

It was assumed that he would appear immediately before the Senate committee. The committee was convened hastily, a crowd filled the room—and waited. After an hour, Chairman Black announced Hopson would be given until 3 o'clock to appear. He said that if he did not appear then a contempt citation would be asked. At 3 o'clock the committee reconvened. Black said that Hill was attempting to bring Hopson in and that the committee would wait a few minutes.

Later, Black said he had another message and that the committee would wait until 4 o'clock. Promptly at that hour Black announced the committee was adjourned. Eight minutes later he was in the Senate asking for the citation.

As Black's report giving reasons for the contempt citation was being read, Chairman O'Connor rushed into the chamber. O'Connor later said his committee expected Hopson to give further testimony and it would not release him to the Senate committee. O'Connor rushed down the aisle to the desk of Floor Leader Robinson. He and Robinson walked to the back of the chamber, where they conferred, O'Connor gesticulating. O'Connor later talked to a number of other Senators on the floor.

There was some delay while a tax-bill vote was being taken. Then the formal resolutoin calling for a citation was read. As the reading ended, Garner pounded with his gavel and said:

"If there is no objection, the resolution will be considered adopted."

The Senate immediately turned to other business.

Earlier in the day Black obtained from the Senate additional authority for the lobby investigation. The Senate authorized his committee to make a complete investigation of the utility business, including inquiries into the personal records of executives. Hopson has been objecting in testimony before the House Committee to revealing amounts paid for services to his personal companies by the Associated Gas & Electric System.

Hill appeared before the Senate Committee in answer to a summons. He was asked to explain testimony by other witnesses that he had interfered with the serving of a summons on Hopson Tuesday. He reperatedly denied he had used physical force to prevent service of the subpena.

Tells of Whereabouts.

Hill said he had seen Hopson during the time he was being sought by the Senate and House committees, but that he did not consider it his duty to turn him over to the committees. He said that Monday and Tuesday Hopson had been in Culpeper, Va., and Alexandria, Va.

The witness said he had not discussed with Hopson the question of whether he should appear before the House or the Senate committees. He said that when he was first sought Hopson said he did not wish to appear because he was not well.

"Can you find out," Black asked, "whether Mr. Hopson is willing to come here without being cited for contempt? There will be no agreement of any kind as to protection or anything else."

"I don't want to undertake to produce Mr. Hopson," Hill replied. "I think his attitude is clear or he would be here."

"It is wholly immaterial to me," Black said, "whether Mr. Hopson testifies first or last. But there is a manifest effort to trifle with this hearing on the theory that some men are bigger than the committee. Unless this attitude ceases a report will be made to the Senate and the responsible persons punished.

"I consider Mr. Hopson has been summoned." (This statement was made before service of the forthwith subpena.) "No man can stick his hands in his pockets and refuse to take a subpena. I don't care to consume the time of the Senate in a trial for contempt, but so far as I am concerned this has gone to the extreme limit."

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, a member of the committee, said he agreed with the chairman.

"I feel there has been complete contempt of the Senate," he said. "Unless Mr. Hopson immediately makes himself available, you, Hopson and others concerned will be brought before the Senate for punishment."

Conduct "Enough."

Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, said he did not believe the conduct of Hopson and his associates "quite expresses their contempt for this committee, but it is enough to put them in contempt."

Hopson told the House committee that he came to Washington last week expecting to testify before the Senate committee, but that when he "discovered what it was" he did not wish to risk his health further. He said he felt it a "duty" to avoid Senate subpena servers. He said, however, that he believed the House committee to be "fair."

A moment later fireworks flared.

Representative Cox (Democrat), Georgia, asked Hopson if the campaign against the holding company bill was not designed to depress the price of utility stocks so that Hopson and his associates could "cash in."

Cox, a small, frail-looking man, half rose from his chair and pointing a pencil at the witness, shouted:

"You had better withdraw that or I'll kick you out of this room."

Hopson was silent.

"You had better withdraw that at once," Cox repeated. "If you don't you'll leave here worse scarred than you would if you answer questions properly."

"I withdraw it," Hopson said quietly.

Questioned by Cox, Hopson testified that in 1929 he held stock in the Associated Gas & Electric System having a book value of $12,000,000. He said the value was now only $1,000,000 and that he had distributed the stock to his family.

"You seem to be laboring under a misapprehension," he said. "You believe I am a rich man. I wish I were."

Hopson said his company had spent $800,000 in opposing the Wheeler-Rayburn bill and that the total might reach $900,000.

Hopson Disappears After Accepting Subpena

Yesterday's session before the House Rules Committee appeared to be a hot one for Mr. Hopson. Here he is taking time out for brow-mopping while on the witness stand.

House Opposes Liquor Bill Plan

Exemption of Brewers, Beer Up for Conference.

Exemption of brewers and beer from liquor control under the FACA bill approved by the Senate yesterday was subject of a conference controversy with the House, which failed to exclude brewers' trade practices and labeling from the Federal regulation extended over distilled liquors.

The House yesterday refused to accept the Senate changes in the measure, ordered that the bill be sent to conference and appointed the following conferees: Doughton, of North Carolina; Sam Hill, of Washington; Cullen, New York (Democrats), and Treadway, Massachusetts, and Bacharach, New Jersey (Republicans).

Senate Passes Connally Bill To Regulate Oil

Measure Voted Without Debate; Move Made to Reconsider.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday passed without debate the Connally oil-regulation bill.

The bill, offered by Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, as a substitute for a broader measure proposed by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, would give congressional consent to the Dallas interstate oil conservation compact already ratified by six States, authorize the President to regulate oil imports on recommendation of the Tariff Commission, and make permanent the Connally "hot-oil" law barring interstate shipment of oil produced in excess of State laws.

An amendment added to the Connally bill by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, would permit others of the 20-odd producing States yet to ratify to come in under it whenever they ratify.

Senator Thomas made no objection to the substitute, even though it eliminated those sections of his bill providing for a permanent Federal oil board and authorizing voluntary agreements in the industry, subject to presidential approval wherever they provided for waiving of the criminal provisions of the antitrust laws.

Later the bill was held up from going to the House when Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, entered a motion to reconsider passage. The motion was not immediately acted upon.

George complained the import provision was too important and controversial to pass upon in such snap fashion and said it affected the whole country, not only the oil-producing States.

Senator McAdoo (Democrat), of California, also said he wanted to see some protests from constituents in California regarding the import feature before passing on the bill.

Report on Hopson 'Contempt'

Following is the text of the report of the Senate lobby committee which led to contempt citations against Howard C. Hopson and W. A. Hill:

To the President of the Senate and to the United States Senate:

Your committee appointed under Senate Resolution No. 165, Seventy-fourth Congress, herewith makes a partial report in connection with the performance of its duties under the said Senate Resolution No. 165.

1. On the thirteenth day of August your committee issued a summons to H. C. Hopson, a copy of which is hereto attached, marked exhibit A.

2. The committee duly designated Joseph P. McCarthy to serve such summons upon H. C. Hopson, and the said J. P. McCarthy undertook to serve the said summons on August 13 in the City of Washington.

3. The said H. C. Hopson declined to accept such summons and the said J. P. McCarthy was prevented from serving such summons upon H. C. Hopson and by interference from one or more persons who were with the said H. C. Hopson, and the said H. C. Hopson, taking advantage of said interference, left the said McCarthy in an elevator, and getting out of the elevator ran from the elevator to a taxicab and thus escaped from the said J. P. McCarthy.

4. One W. A. Hill, an attorney, was with the said H. C. Hopson and the evidence showed that the said W. A. Hill physically interfered with the said J. P. McCarthy in his effort to serve said subpena. The evidence before the committee on the part of the said W. A. Hill discloses that he is the attorney for the said H. C. Hopson and that he has been in conference with the said H. C. Hopson several times during the period while the said H. C. Hopson has been sought by the representatives of the committee in an effort to serve him with a subpena.

5. While the said W. A. Hill has denied before the committee that he actually physically interfered with the service of the subpena, evidence of the other witnesses is that the said W. A. Hill did interfere with the service of the subpena, and in addition to this, said W. A. Hill admits that he attempted to orally persuade the said J. P. McCarthy that summons could not be served on the said H. C. Hopson.

6. On today, the fourteenth day of August, another summons was issued to the said H. C. Hopson, an exact copy of which is hereto attached, marked Exhibit B, and the said summons was served upon the said H. C. Hopson at 11:30 a. m., August 14. Notwithstanding the service of said summons, the said H. C. Hopson has failed, declined, and refused to appear before your committee as directed in said summons, and has failed to give any reason to the committee or any excuse for his failure so to appear.

7. For the convenience of the Senate, there is hereto attached, marked Exhibit C, the sworn evidence of J. P. McCarthy before the committee, and also the sworn evidence of Mr. Paul Y. Anderson, Mr. Richard L. Turner, Mr. Eugene D. Lambert and Mr. Joseph W. Shimon.

8. The evidence further shows that the said H. C. Hopson has known that his presence was desired by your committee to testify, for a number of weeks, and that it was known to his attorney, Mr. W. A. Hill, and the committee has reached the conclusion that plans have been conceived and executed to try to prevent a summons from being served upon the said H. C. Hopson, and that the escape of the said H. C. Hopson from the service of summons has been, as hereinbefore set forth, and was a part of this plan.

9. On account of the matters and things hereinbefore set forth, your committee believes that this Senate should order the arrest of the said H. C. Hopson and W. A. Hill and cause them to be brought before the bar of this Senate, and that the said H. C. Hopson should be required to give testimony before this committee answering such pertinent inquiries as may be made, and that this committee should order the said H. C. Hopson and W. A. Hill to show cause, if any they have, why they should not be punished for contempt of this Senate, on account of the matters and things hereinbefore set forth.

United Church, Name Selected By Methodists

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—"The United Methodist Church" was tentatively agreed upon today as the official name for the proposed combined denomination, composed of the three major American divisions of Wesleyans.

Meeting in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Evanston, the joint commission of unity, consisting of 15 members from the Northern and Southern branches of the Methodist Episcopal Church and from the Methodist Protestant Church, settled three hours of debate by voting temporary approval of that name for the reunited church.

Members of the commission explained that another opportunity for objection to the designation would occur when the full constitution was offered for approval to the three-church group.

Proposed Conferences.

On a map prepared for the commission's study, the six proposed conferences of the united church were outlined as follows:

Northeastern Conference — the New England States, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland.

North Central—Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, West Virginia.

The Negro conference, a separate regional group for communicants of that race, would form the sixth division.

The proposed constitution will be under consideration by the commission of bishops, clergymen and laymen, for the next two days.

Reunion of the three bodies could not be consummated before 1939 at the earliest, officials said. Each general conference must ratify the constitution before the merger, involving more than a billion dollars in property, could be completed.

College Park Conference Hears Official Tell of Monopolies.

Rapping the American Federation of Labor for allowing a convicted racketer to head New York City's live poultry industry, Walter Chambers, Department of Markets secretary for that city, yesterday told the Northeastern Poultry Producers Council that organized labor should oppose such principles.

Before several hundred poultrymen assembled for their opening session at the University of Maryland, he declared that the Federation of Labor had promised to investigate alleged racketeering. Organized labor wants "every racketeer who is connected with a union expelled and punished," he said.

"Picture if you can, an industry dominated by a labor racketeer, who has twice been imprisoned by the United States Government, and yet is allowed by the Labor Federation to return to his activities as head of the union, which controls New York City's $40,000,000 poultry industry."

He referred to Arthur (Tootsie) Herbert, who was convicted in a Federal court of maintaining a monoply in feed, trucking, and coops by coercion and vandalism. Herbert was subsequently sentenced to prison for contempt of court.

Chambers said the trial record revealed that Herbert, Joseph Weiner, and other labor officials "established and maintained monopolies in favor of the New Jersey Coop Co., the New York Live Poultry Trucking Co., and the Metropolitan Feed Co."

"The maintenance of these monopolies adds $100 to the cost of unloading every car of live poultry you ship to New York," he continued.

"In many instances producers are compelled to pay for cooping and trucking services they do not receive. It is no wonder that many of you have found it advisable to ship your poultry to other markets."

Chambers then explained the activities of the Poultry Schochtim Union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, which slaughters poultry for the orthodox Jew trade.

He told of the ousting from the presidency of Charles Herbert, brother of Arthur, and the attempt to reinstate him Tuesday night—an attempt which caused a near riot.

"The vote was taken after petitions had been circulated among the Schoctim requesting Charlie Herbert's reinstatement. I have been reliably informed that threats were made against those who refused to sign such petitions."

Chambers said he also had reliable information that these petitions were circulated by members of the rabbinical board of New York City, upon whom rests the authority of appointing each of the slaughterers. He said he hoped this would be denied by the president of the board.

C. Stanley Mitchell Dies on Shore Trip

Bank of U. S. Chairman Was Ill Several Days.

By the Associated Press.

Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 14.—C. Stanley Mitchell, chairman of the board of the Bank of United States when it closed, died last midnight at High Hill, near Jones Beach, Long Island, according to word received by his family here. He was 53 years old.

Death was ascribed to a heart attack. The former banker had been ill for several days and had gone to the Long Island south shore colony for a rest.

After prosecution of Bank of United States directors in which he aided, Mitchell was inactive for a time. Later he engaged in insurance and a few months ago became associated with Tobey & Kirk, New York brokers.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Mary Cunningham Mitchell, and two daughters, Mrs. Berkley Johnson and Mrs. Frances P. Wagner, of New York, and a son, C. Stanley Mitchell, jr.

John Roosevelt Pays for Speeding

President's Son Forfeits Bond of $10.

By the United Press.

Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., Aug. 14.—John and Franklin Roosevelt, jr., appeared tonight to have embarked on a spirited race for the speed-arrest championship of the Nation's first family.

With seven violations already chalked up against him in three or four States, Junior was way in the lead until John, the President's youngest son, stepped into the picture here today.

He entered the lists under a charge of driving 54 miles an hour, but he clearly showed that he has profited no end by some of the experiences of his next-oldest brother.

The 18-year-old speeder, who is 4 inches more than a strapping 6-footer, didn't appear today when his case was called. His $10 bond was ordered forfeited and that ended the whole thing.

"This publicity will be bad for my father," John speculated, according to Motorcycle Policeman Peter A. Gorey, who ordered him to pull over to the curb yesterday afternoon. "He won't like it."

Again—This August We Are Able To Offer

500 MEN'S FALL SUITS

Suits of identical quality, style, and fabric will be in our regular Fall stocks at $35 and $40. $28.50

More than half of these suits are from a nationally known maker whose label and reputation for fine clothing you will instantly recognize.

The Reason for This Offer

● Good manufacturers consider it most important to keep their organizations intact throughout the year, despite the dull seasons they must experience.

● Two of our best makers came to us at the beginning of their dull season and offered us very special concessions on suits they wanted to make during this slack period—providing we would accept the garments as soon as they were made.

● We accepted their proposition—and now place these new Fall suits on sale at $28.50, which is substantially less than you will have to pay later.

DEFERRED PAYMENTS may be arranged—a small down payment, the balance in equally small payments extended over a period of months.

Special Note

As you know, the wool market is very firm and showing advances continually. This means that fabrics of the same quality as those in these suits are higher priced now than when the makers bought the piece goods for these garments. The result—such suits as these will have to be higher priced this Fall.

G.O.P. Planning For Full Slate At Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Laying its plans for a vigorous fight in the coming campaign for county officers to be elected at the November election, the Arlington County Republican Club meeting last night at Clarendon went on record as favoring the placing of a full ticket in the field.

The action was taken on a motion offered by J. G. Pepper, of Barcroft.

Following the adoption of the motion Mr. Pepper was asked if he would continue to be an independent candidate for membership on the county board, for which he had filed some weeks ago. He replied that if the party placed a full ticket in the field that he would withdraw his candidacy as an independent.

During the meeting Capt. J. H. DeBause, a former Army officer and a resident of the county for the past ten years, publicly announced that he would seek the Republican nomination for the office of sheriff.

Announcement was made that the club will meet twice a month during the months of September and October.

The Arlington County Republican convention to select candidates for county officers will be held Tuesday night at the Lyon Park Community Center, it was decided at a meeting of the executive committee last night in Clarendon. Precinct meetings to name delegates to the convention will be held Monday night.

The precinct meeting places and the delegates to be selected are as follows: Lyon Park, home of Mrs. Sophie Baker, six delegates; Ballston, Meyer's store, six delegates; Clarendon, No. 1, office of C. W. Clever, five delegates; Clarendon, No. 2, office of Lyon, Inc., eight delegates; Glencarlyn, library, two delegates; Cherrydale, McCormick store, six delegates; Carne, office of Ruby Lee Minar, five delegates; Virginia Highlands, firehouse, five delegates; Arlington, Community House, eight delegates; Rosslyn, office of Bryan Gordon, four delegates; East Falls Church, home of O. J. Charnel, two delegates.

More than two years of effort to regulate building construction in the county ended yesterday when the county board at its meeting held at the courthouse unanimously adopted the building code which was presented by the commission, of which William E. A. McShea is the chairman.

In addition to the adoption of the building code, another public safety ordinance regulating the storage of gasoline, inspection and maintenance of fire escapes, the storage of explosives and the burning of refuse was adopted.

The board authorized the appointment of a committee to work for the contemplated extension of the George Washington Memorial Parkway from Key Bridge at Rosslyn to Great Falls along the Potomac River.

Chairman B. M. Smith stated that the committee would be appointed at the adjourned meeting to be held this afternoon, when the board will consider the awarding of the contract for the resurfacing of approximately 30 miles of county roads.

The board authorized the advertising of proposed ordinances presented by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas to prohibit hog farms in Arlington County, and to regulate radio playing, revival meetings, saxophone blowing and the barking of dogs at late hours. The proposed ordinances will be advertised for two weeks in accordance with law and come up before the board at its meeting on August 30 for adoption.

Expenditures totaling $38,065.09, of which $9,403.05 was the county pay roll, were approved.

Stealing a march on friends, Mildred Pinkstaff, clerk in the county auditor's office, and Leon Turnburke, of Cherrydale, were married late yesterday at the home of the Rev. John H. Pearson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They obtained a marriage license from County Clerk John Petty after county offices had closed for the day. Mrs. Turnburke is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Bailie.

The high powered street lights recently installed along Wilson boulevard through the business section having proved satisfactory, the Virginia Public Service Co. has been instructed to install modern globes which will prevent the glare from the naked bulb.

George W. Offutt, chairman of the ABC Board for the District of Columbia, is to be the guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Arlington Rotary Club to be held today at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, opens its fourteenth annual carnival tonight to continue through Saturday night. The event will be staged on the Ballston Baseball Diamond on Wilson boulevard.

The carnival will open with a grand parade along Wilson boulevard, thence over other roads of the county. The parade will include local fire companies, drum and bugle corps, Boy's Scouts and county civic organizations. It will be reviewed by State and local officials and a prize will be awarded to the organization making the best appearance.

A feature of the carnival will be a beauty contest for the selection of "Miss Arlington."

The committee in charge of arrangements is headed by George D. Ricker, general chairman, who is being assisted by T. W. Delehanty, C. W. Hanger, H. C. Duckson and A. H. Pearson.

There will be a special meeting of the men's class of the Cherrydale Baptist Church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Masonic Temple at Cherrydale.

The Edward Douglas White Council will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in its clubrooms on North Washington boulevard at Clarendon. Among matters to be discussed will be plans for the annual picnic to Camp Calvert over Labor Day. All members are requested to be present.

Hey—Just imagine a car that has only been driven 12,700 miles for only $475, and it's a '32 Pontiac, too. It's advertised in the classified section today.

Police Shifted in Montgomery; Kensington School Drive Gains

Club Lockers Burglarized; Mrs. Harger Files Divorce Suit.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

A transfer of the personnel of the Montgomery County police was announced last night by Chief of Police J. William Garrett. Approximately 20 per cent of the force was moved to new stations. Included in the number were two sergeants, a corporal and three privates.

The transfers do not reflect in any manner on the men who were moved, Chief Garrett explained, but are in line with the policy of the department in moving men frequently in order that they might eventually be familiar with all parts of the county. It is to be the policy of the department that every man be moved at least once every six months, unofficial sources revealed.

Those transferred are Sergt. Roy Bodmer, from Rockville to Silver Spring; Sergt. Leroy Rodgers, from Silver Spring to Rockville; Corpl. Harry Merson, from Rockville to Bethesda; Policeman Paul Watkins, from Rockville to Bethesda, and Policemen Marion D. Dayhoff and Paul Burner, from Bethesda to Rockville.

Edward Peter, counsel to the Montgomery County commissioners, will meet tomorrow with representatives of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to discuss the civil suits which have been filed by the county against the railroad as a result of alleged failure of the railroad to guard the Rockville grade crossing.

Fifteen suits have been filed by the comissioners, each of which charges that on a certain date the company had failed to tomply with a law requiring a watchman at the crossing until midnight.

Fourteen Williamsport High School children were killed at the crossing several months ago while it was unguarded between 10 p. m. and midnight. The crossing now is guarded at all hours.

Aroused over the announcement of the school projects to be constructed in Montgomery County with the proceeds of the $784,000 PWA loan and grant recently made by Administrator Ickes, which failed to include a junior high school for Kensington, the United Citizens Committee of that town has called a mass meeting to which members of the board of education have been invited.

The decision to call the mass meeting of citizens was reached after a meeting Wednesday night when the committee was informed by Julius P. Stadler, a member of the board, that his group contemplates the purchase of a site for the proposed school in the next few weeks. He declined to give the location of the site. He said, however, that it had been inspected and approved by Dr. N. L. Engelhardt, of Columbia University, who recently made a survey of county school needs.

The mass meeting, which will be held at a date to be determined after a conference with Supt. of Schools Edwin W. Brooms, is the latest drive to secure the new junior high school for Kensington.

The United Committee recently adopted a resolution calling upon the board of education to construct the new local high school, "if not sooner, then concurrently with the construction of the proposed new junior high school at Montgomery Hill." The schedule announced last week included provision for the school in the vicinity of Montgomery Hill, but made no mention of Kensington.

The committee was advised by Mr. Stadler, however, that the PWA loan and grant does not represent all of the school funds, and that an additional program is being carried on by the county authorities.

Four proposed road construction projects in Takoma Park were inspected yesterday afternoon by 25 local civic leaders and State and county officials, under the sponsorship of a joint civic committee headed by Judge Herman C. Heffner.

A discussion of the proposed projects was held preceding the tour. Short talks on the aims of the authorities with regard to improvements in that section were given by Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw and Chief Engineer Irving C. Root, of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission; County Commissioner Paul M. Coughlan, of Montgomery County; the Rev. Henry H. Nicoll, supervisor of Montgomery county roads, and E. C. Duncan, field supervisor of the Maryland State roads commission. The town of Takoma Park was represented by Town Councilman Harold R. Orcutt.

The projects recommended by the joint committee and inspected yesterday were the proposed location of the park drive along Sligo Creek in Sligo Valley parkway in Montgomery County to New Hampshire avenue extended in Prince Georges County, embracing two separate projects, extension of New Hampshire avenue from the present terminus at the District Line to University lane and thence to the Baltimore-Washington boulevard, and the improvement of Eastern avenue from Laurel avenue in Takoma Park to New Hampshire avenue extended.

Yesterday's meeting was the first official recognition given to the campaign for these improvements that has been under way for some time and culminated last winter, when a joint citizens committee was appointed by Mayor Frederick L. Lewton of Takoma Park.

Conflicting jurisdictions has been given as one reason for the delay since the improvements involve local authorities in two counties, the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the State roads commission. It was indicated at yesterday's parley that an effort will be made to present a united proposal for the work with a view to securing Federal funds for the improvements.

Gaining entry through a front winow, robbers yesterday ransacked ten lockers of members at the Burning Tree Club on Persimmon Tree road and stole $79.85 from a steel locker in the office of the club. Contents of the lockers had not been ascertained last night.

Mrs. Alice M. Harger, of Sligo Park Hills, yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce from David A. Harger in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md.

The wife alleges in her bill, through the law firm of Peter & Simpson, that the husband made threats on her life and had deserted her in August, 1931. The couple was married in 1918 and has one child. The wife asks custody of the son and alimony.

A total of 170 patients was admitted to the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring last month, according to the report of Miss Elizabeth Browne Jones, superintendent of the hospital, presented to the meeting of the executive board at the home of Mrs. L. C. Probert.

The 170 patients were divided into 86 pay patients and 84 State cases. Six births and five deaths were recorded and 26 major and 90 minor operations were performed. There were 25 accident cases treated and 109 X-rays made and 346 laboratory examinations.

Dr. Esther Miles, of the George Washington University, has been substituting for Dr. M. T. Lucius, who has been on vacation. It was announced that approximately $1,800 was realized from the annual supper, although returns still are incomplete.

About 30 new members were received into the Takoma Park Library Association at a meeting Tuesday at the headquarters, 807 Jackson avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

The membership committee headed by Chester C. Waters has been conducting an active drive for the last two weeks. Waters reported the membership to be 70. Constitution and by-laws were adopted at the meeting. Reports showed that gifts of books were being received at the rate of 200 a week and that the library now has listed 1,350 volumes. Books for circulation are now being borrowed from the Maryland State Library Commission.

The story hour conducted every Monday morning at 10 a. m. is being attended by about 30 children. All children, of Takoma Park, are invited to the session. Mrs. Ellen M. Dashiell, president of the story tellers league, and Miss Barbara N. Bennion will have charge of the hour next Monday. Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt is president.

Following are the members received into the library Tuesday: Mrs. C. Aitchison, Mrs. E. J. Hurdle, Mrs. Robert Lyon, Mrs. Harold Heffner, Mrs. H. D. Albin, H. M. Smythe, Charles W. Thompson, L. V. Lampson, John T. Tucker, jr., Mrs. Walter F. Duffy, Mrs. Arthur Roberts, Mrs. S. E. McCormick, Mrs. Grant Bergstresser, William Robinson, R. E. Gould, Mrs. T. H. Fulmer, Mrs. Azro J. Brooklyn Man Killed by Truck In Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Joseph Kerrigan, 22, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was struck and killed yesterday by a truck driven by Taylor Page, colored, 28, of Prospect, Va., and owned by the Taylor Co., of that town.

According to a statement by the driver, which was corroborated by Frank O'Brien, Edward Plunkett and Felix Klaus, all of Brooklyn, and companions of Kerrigan, the truck was proceeding south on the Washington-Richmond highway, and when it reached a point between Monroe and Bellefonte avenues swerved to avoid striking another truck, and struck Kerrigan, who was walking on the right-hand side of the road. Kerrigan was taken to the Alexandria Hospital by Page, and was pronounced dead on arrival, by Dr. Samuel B. Moore.

An inquest was held by Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, and a verdict of accidental death, with no criminal negligence, rendered. Page was released, but the truck is being held by local police, pending receipt of word from relatives of Kerrigan.

Health authorities of Alexandria stated yesterday that there is no ground for the alleged infantile paralysis scare in Alexandria, despite the fact that outbreaks of the disease have appeared in other Virginia cities. There are at present no cases in Alexandria, it is stated.

The water of the Alexandria municipal swimming pool is tested daily by the health department, and should there be any evidence of the germs of the disease, the pool would immediately be closed, the authorities say. They also contend that playground activities tend to prevent such diseases, rather than aid them.

Alexandria police are searching for a man who passed a $10 counterfeit bill on Mrs. Ethel Allen, who conducts a tourist home at 728 North Washington street.

The man is said to have engaged a room at the home of Mrs. Allen and tendered a $10 bill in payment, receiving $8 in change. Shortly afterward he left the house, saying he would return soon. When he failed to return, Mrs. Allen examined the note and found it to be a poorly-executed counterfeit.

The man was described as being about 5 feet 9 inches tall, dressed in light clothing and weighing about 170 pounds.

Alexandria municipal officers will address the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at its luncheon today in the George Mason Hotel. Included on the program will be Mayor E. C. Davison, City Manager E. C. Dunn, Charles H. Callahan, commissioner of revenue; Capt. John S. Arnold, chief of police, and James M. Duncan, jr., chief of the fire department. Irving Diener will be in charge of the program and Vice President Harry F. Kennedy will preside.

The regular monthly meeting of the Forty and Eight, honor society of the American Legion, will be held at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in Gadsby's Tavern, when the newly elected officers will be installed and final plans completed for the State convention to be held at Virginia Beach in September.

A meeting of the Maj. James E. King Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, will be held in Lee Camp Hall at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Commander Charles B. Emmons will preside.

Schools Open Sept. 10.

Prince Georges County's schools for white persons will open September 10. Those for colored will open September 9, it has been announced at the board of aducation offices at Upper Marlboro. Teachers' meetings will be held the day before each opening.

Postoffices Set For Marlboro And Aberdeen

Baltimore and Salisbury to Benefit by U. S. Construction Program.

Two new postoffice buildings will be constructed in nearby Maryland out of the $60,000,000 emergency construction fund, it was announced yesterday.

The new structures were included in a list of 351 public building projects approved for the Nation in a joint conference between officials of the Treasury and Postoffice Departments.

In selecting the new projects, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., and Postmaster General James A. Farley said they had been guided by the wording of the act which provided that they "shall endeavor to distribute the projects equitably throughout the country."

Experienced personnel of both departments will begin immediately on their work of acquiring the land where necessary, and preparing plans and specifications for new projects in order that the greatest number of contracts may be awarded during the fall and winter.

Several sites have been mentioned for the Upper Marlboro Postoffice, which is expected to be constructed at a cost of $60,000. All of the proposed sites are on Main street.

Other places in Maryland to benefit by the blanket construction program are Baltimore, where repairs will be made; Salisbury, where an extension will be added and remodeling done, and Aberdeen, which will receive a new site and building.

Paralysis Clinic Seeks WPA Funds

Directors of 'The Pines' Plan for New Buildings.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 14. Local members of the advisory board for "The Pines," clinic for infantile paralysis victims, announced here today after a week-end meeting of the State board of advisers for West Virginia's crippled children, that they will apply to the Federal Works Progress Administration for a new hospital unit, to consist of three buildings forming three sides of a square, which will give greatly increased space and adequate facilities for treating crippled children.

Architect Wilbur Meanor, of the State relief administration, put before the board a drawing of the three-building hospital unit which was given tentative approval. The buildings as sketched would place the convalescent hospital in one building; a school and swimming pool in another section; and the administrative unit in the third building. When costs are figured, application will be made for the principal part of the building expense.

Maj. Francis W. Turner, State public welfare department director, said Saturday plans were already under way for purchasing the site of The Pines. It will be placed under trusteeship of the Morgan County Court.

Lightning Hits 3 Houses Here; Heat Is Broken

Hourly Temperatures.

Noon	90	4 p. m.	94
1 p. m.	91	5 p. m.	84
2 p. m.	92	6 p. m.	85
3 p. m.	93	7 p. m.	85

A violent electrical storm, breaking suddenly late yesterday afternoon, brought Washington temporary relief from the blistering heat, lowering the temperature 10 degrees as lightning struck three dwellings in the Northeast section.

Just before the storm, which was accompanied by slight rainfall, the maximum reading was 94 degrees, recorded at the Weather Bureau at 4 p. m.

This was 4 degrees below Tuesday's maximum of 98, which prostrated five persons. Despite the sultriness and the rising mercury, no heat prostrations were reported to police or the hospitals yesterday, but suffering was general.

Lightning Hits Twice.

The other South Dakota avenue home in the lightning's path was that of Mark S. Dondero, at 3721. Fixtures in the back room of the Dondero residence were damaged.

At 2717 Perry avenue northeast, the residence of Fred M. Grant, the lightning struck the insulated roof, causing light damage. In each case firemen responded to the alarm, and put out the fire.

Yesterday's heat brought thousands of Washington children, with their nursemaids and parents, to parks and public pools and circles.

Elephants Cooled.

At the Zoo, keepers turned the hose on the elephants and bears, much to the amusement of late afternoon throngs. Babe, the ancient circus elephant, and her companion, Kthil, trumpeted gratefully as the cool streams struck their leathery hides.

The polar bears and the Alaskan Kodiac bears rolled on their backs in the sprays of cool water, and spent the rest of the day diving in and out of their specially constructed pools.

Today will be partly cloudy, with possible showers and slight change in temperature, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Schenck Denies Film Company Violated Myrna Loy's Contract

Red-Haired Star Charges a Near-Breakdown Because of Treatment.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, denied tonight Myrna Loy's statement that the film company had violated its contract with the red-haired movie actress.

Schenck added "the company will by all legal means enforce its rights under the contract."

Schenck's statement was a reply to Miss Loy's announcement today that she had abrogated her contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, charging the company had broken the pact by failure to make "frequently promised adjustments" in the contract terms.

"Our company has in no way violated the contract for the services of Miss Loy," Schenck held. 'On the contrary, each letter of it has been observed and all we ask is that Miss Loy fulfill her obligations."

Immediate Increase.

"Miss Loy receives $1,500 weekly with gradual increases during the term of her employment. She has chosen to demand an immediate increase to $3,000 weekly."

The freckle-faced and blue-eyed film actress who became a star in a year said: "There is nothing about my case which is a test of anything but the company's sense of justice. The contract I was induced to sign held me for several years, although the company could get out of it at almost any time.

"I was given the customary assurances its conditions would be adjusted if I achieved stardom. I have also begged for stipulations such as the right to have an occasional holiday. The manner in which I have been handled finally led to a near-breakdown.

15 Films in Two Years.

"I have done everything I could to seek the frequently promised adjustments. After 15 pictures in two years—three times the normal number—I felt the time had come for fair treatment, but I was passed from one executive to another and got nowhere."

Added to this, Miss Loy said, "is the fact that my salary has been stopped without any explanation whatever—apparently for punitive purposes because I have asked for what was promised."

$184,000 Gems Missing After Mdivani Crash

Authorities Hunt Jewels of Baroness, Injured in Fatal Accident.

Barcelona, Spain, Aug. 14.—Authorities began a search tonight for a fortune in jewelry reported lost by Baroness Maud von Thyssen in the automobile crash August 1, which cost the life of her companion, Prince Alexis Mdivani.

Baron von Thyssen said his wife had a satchel containing jewelry worth 2,800,000 francs ($184,000), when Mdivani's automobile left the highway and overturned.

The baron said the baroness was recovering consciousness at Gerona Hospital, when she informed him she was carrying the satchel in her lap. Hospital officials denied seeing the satchel, when the baroness was brought to the hospital. A careful search of her effects failed to reveal the missing gems.

The baron said the satchel contained a number of diamond bracelets, two diamond necklaces, brooches and other jewelry.

The baroness was reported at her hospital to have lost the sight of one eye in the accident. Mdivani's sister, Princess Isabel, who has continued in a state of collapse from shock at her brother's death, was attended by a specialist summoned from Paris.

Her husband, Jose Maria Sert, painter, left for Paris to meet Princes Serge and David Mdivani, brothers of Alexis, who are en route from the United States. It was reported that Alexis' divorced wife, the former Barbara Hutton, also might attend the conference.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 14.—Countess Kurt Haugwitz von Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton of the Woolworth millions, today denied:

That she is expecting a child.

That she is investigating the will of her former husband, the late Prince Alexis Mdivani.

That she came to Paris to consult her lawyers regarding the Mdivani estate.

That she hopes to recover a Venice palace she gave Mdivani before their marriage ended in Reno.

High Winds Fan Roaring Forest Fires in West

Destroys Valuable Timber as Blazes Rage in National Parks.

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 14.—Wild deer and bear fled for their lives in the Northwest tonight before forest fires driven out of control by high winds. Forest Service workers said there was evidence some of the fires were incendiary.

More than 1,000 fighters battled flames raging in Idaho, Oregon and Montana. Valuable commercial timber was lost. Domestic livestock as well as game animals perished.

On the west side of Yellowstone River, 25 miles southwest of Livingston, Mont., flames roared over an estimated 8,000 acres. Despite the efforts of 200 fighters, fire near Deer Lodge, also in Montana, was out of control, covering about 400 acres.

Near The Dalles, Oreg., observers stationed on peaks with field glasses said fire seemed to be running wild over 3,000 to 4,000 acres. It swept toward valuable timber stands in the Hood River National Forest. The vast, week-old Idaho National Forest fire in west-central Idaho, swept out of control today by winds, spread over nearly 20,000 acres. More than 800 men fought to trench it. The region is practically uninhabited.

Pension Restoration Will Take Six Weeks

Restoration of Spanish War pensions as provided in the bill signed Tuesday by President Roosevelt will be accomplished automatically within about six weeks, George McAleer, commander of the District of Columbia Department of the United Spanish War Veterans, said yesterday.

Washington's Security Plan.

Final enactment of the national social security bill should clear the way for final action on the local measures giving effect to this significant policy in the District. Three bills providing unemployment insurance and pensions for the aged and the blind have been reported out by the Senate District Committee. But since they differ substantially from the bills already passed by the House, skillful legislative strategy will be necessary to insure their enactment before adjournment.

For the most part the Senate committee has improved the unemployment insurance plan for Washington. It has completely repudiated the idea that the Capital City should be used as an experimental center in this field. The Senate, as well as the House, would do well to retain in the bill those provisions designed to serve local needs in spite of the desire of some experts for a "guinea pig" community to play with. Loose proposals might bring the whole system here into disrepute without serving any useful national purpose. The District is not a typical industrial or agricultural community and lessons supposedly learned here might have to be unlearned elsewhere, even if they did not cause serious local consequences.

Certainly the system should be controlled by a local board, as the Senate committee provides. The wisdom of imposing pay roll taxes gradually, and of reducing levies on concerns which keep their workmen steadily employed, is not open to question. Obviously the Senate committee is cognizant of the need for proceeding cautiously with the object of establishing a system that will endure. In some respects it may have gone too far in this direction, but if no compromise is reached in conference liberalizing amendments can be enacted after the system begins to function. The most important thing is to set up an insurance plan that will be actuarially sound from the beginning.

Theoretically there is no good reason why the District government should not contribute to the unemployment insurance fund. Destitution among jobless families is a community problem that should not be entirely shifted to employers. On the other hand, many State Legislatures are not providing for this type of contribution, and local authorities fear that special municipal payments to the fund, which would make possible benefits for a maximum of 26 weeks, might attract a disproportionate number of transient job seekers here. Their reasoning may be correct, but they must also realize that maximum benefit payments of $15 per week for a period of only 16 weeks will not provide a system which will eliminate the need for direct relief of the competent unemployed, as is the fundamental objective.

Experience will undoubtedly be needed to secure the proper adjustment of benefits to tax burdens, industrial conditions and the insurance plans of other communities. As a matter of principle, however, the desirability of eliciting contributions from local governments and employes as well as employers is not open to question.

Molehill Or Mountain?

Not long ago many Americans were inclined to smile a little at Japan's formal protest against a cartoon of the Mikado in a New York magazine. More recently a good deal less amusement was aroused by the ill-mannered action of a Seattle club in following the first incident with a stupid burlesque upon the Emperor of Japan. It was admitted that the cartoon to some extent, and the gratuitous burlesque much more, erred in the matter of taste. But there lingered a general feeling that diplomatic representations in the issues made mountains out of molehills.

Perhaps this was a superficial criticism. Perhaps there are in these official Japanese representations other factors than a desire to protect the Japanese people's belief—if they really have that belief—that their emperor is divine. It is at least plausible to suppose that a gentle ridicule, impossible in Japan, would also shake a power which has cleverly harnessed itself to the theory of imperial divinity: the power of the military clique long paramount at Tokyo. The assassination of Gen. Nagata, director of military affairs in the Japanese army, certainly confirms reports of serious dissatisfaction in that service.

It is never a healthy sign when politics invade an army. But when the army takes control of politics, as it has done in Japan, the possibilities of such anarchic developments as this assassination are greatly increased.

The Forgotten Warning.

Anyone reading the President's apology for signing the Spanish-American War veterans' pension bill will find it difficult to believe that he is the same leader who little more than two years ago induced Congress to accept a new pensions policy "to put our Government's house in order." At that time the President estimated the deficit for four depression years at $5,000,000,000 and sent this warning to Congress:

> Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger . . . We must move with a direct and resolute purpose now. The members of the Congress and I are pledged to immediate economy.

White House estimates now indicate that the depression deficit will reach a total of more than $17,000,000,000 before the end of the current fiscal year. Yet the President has signed a bill wiping out the last vestige of savings effected by his economy act. At the beginning of his term he insisted, in his appeal for economy, that "the very stability of our Government itself is concerned and when that is concerned the benefits of some must be subordinated to the needs of all." Those were words of wisdom, but the present instance is only one illustration of how completely they have been forgotten by the Administration.

It may be argued, of course, that if the President had rejected the bill Congress would have passed it over his veto. But neither this probability, nor Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to forestall pensions for World War veterans, justifies abandonment of the principle for which he stood when politics were a less influential factor in White House counsels. Moreover, the elimination of extravagant abuses from the pensions system was not the only principle at stake. The Administration has persistently contended that no increase should be made in the ordinary budget without a corresponding increase in revenue. It has now tolerated the destruction of this essential safeguard of sound fiscal policy.

The pending tax program has at least made clear the difficulty of matching even a small part of the deficit by increased revenue. The Senate plan for a graduated tax on corporations is almost universally denounced as an impediment to increased employment and industrial activity. But even optimistic estimates indicate that this unjustifiable levy would produce little more than will be required to pay additional pensions to this one group of war veterans. The entire tax bill will fall considerably short of covering the expenditures resulting from destruction of the economy act.

Comparisons of this sort expose the sham of the tax bill as well as the irresponsible attitude of the Administration toward expenditures. It is impossible to contemplate the antipathy of Congress for any genuine revenue-producing bill, and the ease with which new expenditures are voted and approved, without recalling the President's forgotten warning against calamity resulting from "loose fiscal policy."

Indefensible Obstruction.

Mysterious opposition has twice prevented Senate consideration of the bill to control trade in arms and munitions. A short time ago Senator King blocked discussion of the measure without stating the basis of his objection. On Tuesday Senator Johnson followed a similar course, apparently merely because totally unrelated bills to regulate war profits and establish a neutrality policy are not yet ready for enactment.

The Senate Munitions Committee has done well to postpone action on the extremely complicated issue of controlling war profits until next year. Before any effective legislation can be drafted the committee must decide what constitutes munitions. Shall the profits of wheat and cotton growers, automobile and clothing factories, producers of chemicals, etc., be curbed along with those of arms manufacturers? Obviously these commodities are as essential to the conduct of modern war as are actual guns and powder. This problem demands the most careful study and any legislation in this field will have to be scrupulously safeguarded to avoid paralysis of our economic machinery in times of emergency.

Likewise the neutrality bills have innumerable ramifications that can not be explored in a brief period. Only zealots will regret their postponement until they can be discussed without the pressure that inevitably attends the wind-up of a congressional session in late summer. But these measures have only a remote relationship to the munitions control bill which the State Department is properly anxious to have enacted. That piece of legislation was purposely drawn as a preliminary step. It would merely set up the machinery by which a comprehensive policy for the control of war implements might be put into operation.

Senator Johnson's opposition to S. 2998 raises a question, therefore, as to whether he has ever read the bill. If so, he seems completely to have misconstrued its purpose. Enactment of this measure is essential to permit the Government to carry out international obligations it has already assumed under the arms traffic convention of 1925. Failure of Congress to set up this administrative machinery would not only prevent the application of effective embargoes in such cases as the late Chaco, or threatened Ethiopian, war. It would also seriously embarrass the State Department in its efforts to promote any reasonable international agreement forwarding governmental control over the implements of destruction.

How About Saving?

The United States Chamber of Commerce has opportunely called attention to an aspect of the budget-balancing program which the Administration has sadly neglected, despite its zeal to collect a relatively small amount of new taxes from a handful of wealthy men. In a statement published on Monday the Chamber points out that several times $270,000,000—the maximum returns anticipated—could be saved without impairing the efficiency of any activities now under way.

Attention is especially called to the budgeted increases in regular expenditures for the current fiscal year, placed at $3,300,000,000, compared with actual outlays of $2,555,000,000 during the past fiscal year. It certainly seems that a large saving could be made without any detriment to the regular establishments. For instance, the huge expansion of our defense outlays can not easily be defended on emergency grounds, nor can it be readily excused in view of the state of the Treasury. Other suggested sources of income might, as stated, be found by reducing the huge cash balances at the disposal of disbursing officers, thereby saving interest and realizing on some of the assets of Federal financing agencies.

Of especial interest is the explanation as to how reductions of more than $1,000,000,000 might be made in emergency outlays for relief purposes. If the Administration really intends to make the State and local governments provide for unemployables, if it keeps the CCC and the WPA within bounds, and makes reasonable allowance for expanding business activity and increasing employment, large savings would be possible. As the minority report on the tax bill indicates, reasonable economies would make this whole misnamed revenue measure superfluous.

There may be disagreement as to precisely how much can be saved, but the evidence strongly indicates that very large savings are possible, if the Administration is disposed to cut costs. On the other hand, if it insists upon spending the billions which have been appropriated, the goal of a balanced budget will recede into the dim distance. Billions certainly can not now be raised, so if financial solvency is to be preserved, billions must be saved. The knowledge that it is possible is a comforting reflection, even though present spending policies do not indicate the existence of any desire to spend cautiously.

A Broken Lance.

William Watson belonged to that group of ultimate Victorians whose verse led England out of Victorianism. It introduced a new note into the music of imperial Britain, but never learned, or cared to hear, the harmonies, at once more rugged and less virile, of the brief Edwardian epoch. When one thinks of this Yorkshireman, one thinks immediately of three other "sons": John Davidson, Francis Thompson and Ernest Dowson. All were born in the early days of the nineteenth century's second half; all were transitionalists, and only Watson survived beyond the first decade of the nineteen hundreds.

Of course, despite the many qualities that they possessed in common, they present wide differences. Davidson's "Ballad of a Nun" shares little with Thompson's "Hound of Heaven," less with the Cynara of unhappy Dowson's tragic lyric, and almost nothing at all with Watson's "England, My England," or the militant march of his sonnets on "The Purple East." Watson was unique among the quartet in that he was often polemical.

Was the cause of Irish independence unpopular? He pleaded it the more vehemently. Were his pro-Boer poems reducing his total sales 60 per cent? "I don't give a damn," he cried, "if they drop 100 per cent!" Once his partisanship led him into a serious error of taste: His bitter attack on Margot and Violet Asquith cost him the laureateship.

Nevertheless, it is his non-political verse that, of his vast output, has the best chance to endure. "Wordsworth's Grave" and the ode on the death of Tennyson contain intimations of immortality; there is more than Swinburne in the "Hymn to the Sea"—

> When, in extravagant revel, the Dawn,
> a Bacchante upleaping,
> Spills, on the tresses of Night, vintages > golden and red.

Sir William Watson deserved of his country more than knighthood and grinding poverty. Perhaps he will receive less grudging recognition from posterity.

"A lion in his natural surroundings will be polite if you are," says a naturalist. If we were to meet up with a lion we'd be extremely polite. We'd immediately take off our hat—and run.

Our Hard-Working Bureaucracy.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Mr. Roosevelt's concern over the bureaucratic tendencies of a former President, whom he accused of piling bureau on bureau and commission on commission, must be shared by Dr. Tugwell in the piling up of salaried personnel in his new Resettlement Administration.

In an unguarded moment it occurred to Director Tugwell to discharge some 7,000 or 8,000 of his hard-working assistants, an inventory having disclosed that the Resettlement Administration is paying 16,600 workers, or three times as many as the NRA employed in the co-operative purification and regimentation of industry.

Which recalls that large number of workers employed by NRA are still on the payroll, with little more to do than twiddle their thumbs and draw their pay; furnishing an illustration of the ease with which bureaucratically minded Presidents pile bureau on bureau and commission on commission.

Power Is Not Safety.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: De Quincey or some old boy of his day wrote an essay called "Murder as a Fine Art." Prefix the words power, speed and the result would do as title for E. N. Blye's reply to Wilbur Rogers. Mr. Blye sounds too much like a motor industry apologist to be taken seriously, in his citing of the mossier arguments in favor of power-speed to be found in any journal devoted to the trade.

The industry manifestly isn't proud of the notches on the gun butt of its toy and joy, so by juggling of technicalities it dishes up alibis. The dumb driver is always the fall guy, never the weapon put in dumb—or any other—hands. Mr. Blye rakes up the old paradox that speed-power nevertheless spell safety—industry's No. 1 alibi. Its second best, the accidents that happen at low speeds, is supposed to justify the speed-power gag.

He cites low truck, bus, etc., accidents. The truck accident record, it happens, is as fragrant as a wood pussy. As for buses, reckless drivers, if they survive tryout and probation, are quickly culled. The same selectivity applied to other drivers would send 75 per cent of us back to velocipedes. The professional driver doesn't barter his living by haphazard driving; he has air brakes, regular route, regular schedule, safety observance hammered into him.

Of course, the moguls are motivated by lofty motives of economical transportation, not greed and grab, in selling machine guns and dynamite in shape of 80-horsepower cars to whoever has a down payment. The young driver hasn't lost interest in the question: "How fast will it go?" Mr. Blye notwithstanding. It's equally hard to swallow the rot about the glory of high speed-power if you've been bruised or bent, lost arm, leg or eye, had your ribs caved, insides crushed or brains scrambled by this great boon to humanity. It should be great consolation to the 300,000 killed and millions maimed that it was done by economical transportation that is safe because it has this "paradoxical" margin of speed and power.

The Filene Type.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please allow me to join in the chorus of praise for your editorials. They were good 20 years ago, and they are good now. I read them with a great deal of interest and profit.

I thank you especially for the one in today's issue, "Moscow at 75." Years ago Prof. Harry F. Ward, of the Methodist Church, said to me: "The Filene brothers are two of the finest Christians in the United States"—meaning that in a business way they exemplified the spirit of Christianity.

I have had correspondence with E. A. He is the type of man we can not afford to lose. I pray for his recovery. A. H. THOMPSON.

Oregonian Replies In Salmon Debate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to an editorial in your issue of July 25, entitled "Salmon and Dams." In this, you gave the figures in an article I wrote for Nature Magazine to the effect that the annual income from the salmon fisheries of the Columbia River is between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000, or the equivalent of a 5 per cent return on a $200,000,000 investment.

In your issue of July 28, you publish a letter by John W. Kelly stating that the income from the salmon industry is not this large. My figures are conservative. Dr. L. E. Griffin, of Reed College, in the Literary Digest of August 3, says the annual value of the Columbia River salmon is $15,000,000.

Mr. Kelly states that our concern in saving the Columbia River salmon is only a smoke screen because the Federal Government is entering the hydroelectric field. This is untrue, and he knows it. He knows we have been fighting various power companies for years to get adequate fishways over their dams. We need electrical energy to build up this country, but we also need food. Why do power companies take possession of our best salmon spawning streams when there are other streams and many places where electricity can be produced?

The Columbia River has produced and is producing more salmon than any other stream in the world. The spring run of fish can not survive unless they can get to the spawning beds and the fingerlings return safely to the ocean. Nature has bestowed this $200,000,000 gift upon the people of the country. Once destroyed, it can not be replaced. Mr. Kelly and others should keep in mind that there are no mortgages upon this investment. No taxes are levied upon the citizens of the United States to keep up this industry.

We already have one big dam in the Columbia River at Rock Island. The fishway installed when this dam was built is inadequate for the salmon, and another is now being built. The Government allotted $31,000,000 for the Bonneville Dam and at first set aside only $800,000 for fishways, which was $4,200,000 short of what fish experts asked to protect the salmon. It took a lot of fighting to get the present allotment of $3,200,000. No one yet knows whether this fund is sufficient, as all the plans are not completed to guard the interests of the fish. Problems of this magnitude have never been met before, and they need considerable study.

The Government has given $61,000,000 for another big dam further up the Columbia at the Grand Coulee. On account of its great height, engineers claim that fishways are impractical. Therefore no funds have been allotted, but a large hatchery is to be built there.

The Pacific Northwest is rich in natural resources and nothing will stop its development. However, too often a gift of nature is unnecessarily destroyed. Some of the most difficult problems we have are weighing the public values of a natural resource in comparison with some new change promoted by man. It is always good business to first figure any losses, then count the costs with interest and try to get a clear picture of the final results.

More on Clause 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appeared in your paper a few days ago a letter from E. B. regarding Clause 213 of the economy act. I can not let his statements go unchallenged, as I think he is mistaken in his viewpoint.

He states that Government salaries are paid by taxing the people of the States, therefore they are entitled to their just quota of positions. That is true; no one will dispute that. He overlooks the fact, though, that up until a couple of years ago it was virtually impossible to obtain civil service workers from distant States. They would not come here to Washington, and that is why the quotas of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia are overdrawn. Nowadays people ore coming clear across the continent to accept the smallest jobs in the Government service and are glad to get them.

What effect will a few dismissals under Clause 213 have on this condition, which has existed for many years? And what of the service of 10, 15 and 20 years that some of these married workers have? What of the retirement allowances they have built up? They are summarily dismissed for something (their marriage) that may have happened many years before the enactment of this clause. How were they to know that the Government would pass such a ban?

He goes on to say that Clause 213 does not discriminate against married women. What he means is that it does not discriminate against them alone. It is a discrimination against married men as well. In short, it discriminates, and no clause or provision that shows discrimination is based on fairness and justice. It is true Uncle Sam gives these married workers a choice. In cases of proposed dismissal, it lets them decide which one will go. Now isn't that just too ducky for words? The chief fault of the married persons clause is that it was primarily intended to create vacancies and spread the distribution of positions. This it has failed to do. Not only that, no two departments interpret this law alike. With new bureaus cropping up every day, the number of vacancies available by reason of dismissed married persons is so small that it is a mere drop in the bucket. If E. B. can point out anything logical or fair in this clause, I would be glad to have him do so.

In The Wake Of The Poets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An editorial in your issue of August 3 follows the fashion of most newspapers by "laughing at" an attempt of the poets to secure some form of Federal support for their work.

We know that the policy of your paper is not only fair and impartial, but progressive as well, and in order that your press reports of the future may be confined to facts rather than fiction, we are sending you under separate cover all the available information we have and all that should be required about the Poet Laureate League.

With these facts before you, may we recommend and even urge that you use your columns to either support or suppress the program of this association which may leave far-reaching cultural consequences in its wake for either good or evil?

The Post Impressionist

H. M. Stanley—Of Abyssinia.

Post Office, Thursday.

UNPLEASANT surprises are the ordained lot of the columnist. So, just when we hoped to interest fellow-impressionists in Rowlands as a writer of boys' fiction, Frank Hird has to come along and remind us of Rollant in embattled Ethiopia, resurrecting all the controversies as to whether Stanley's allegedly factual volumes didn't contain a pinch of fiction.

Hird proves beyond peradventure that they did not, but he sadly diverts readers from our theses. He demonstrates that, as picaresque biography, there is a near-equal to "Huckleberry Finn" in the true life story of this John Rowlands, alias John Rollant, alias Sir Henry M. Stanley, Knight Commander of the Bath.

The discoverer of Livingstone, indeed! H. M. S.—a happy combination of initials—was a runaway almshouse child, pedagog, Confederate and Union soldier in the American Civil War, storekeeper, Indian fighter, explorer, imperial political pioneer, representative of Red Leopold in the Congo, book writer—and first-rate newspaperman. That's a little of what Mr. Hird tries to recall.

Oh, well, we'll go on with it! We're modestly sure that what we had almost forgotten few will wholly remember.

Although Henry M. Stanley was born—at Denbigh, in Wales—only 94 years ago, there's doubt as to whether he was born Rollant or Rowlands. He was called by both names; the register of his baptism records him as John Rowlands—and nothing much more is known about him until, his father dead and his mother desperately poor, he was sent to a nearby workhouse.

There, however, he did eventually leave his mark. He left it on the superintendent. Mr. James Francis was a brute; but Rollant-Rowlands, at 15, had courage. He beat up the superintendent and ran away.

He seems to have run away, later, from a minor school whereat he got a place as pupil-teacher. He knocked around Liverpool—cabin-boyed it to New Orleans.

Then John Rollant-Rowlands became Henry Morton Stanley. A prosperous gentleman of the latter name got the boy a job and subsequently adopted him—but, dying, left him no money.

Sixty-one—and the Civil War, H. M. enlisting in the Confederate forces. '62—and Shilo, H. M. a prisoner sent to Camp Douglas. Released on a kept promise to enter the Federal Artillery, he was speedily invalided out, and wandering back to Denbigh, found his mother's door closed against him.

He took to the sea again, was shipwrecked, entered the United States Navy. The war over, he loitered through the then Wild West, fighting in Hancock's Indian campaign, earning a living by writing for the old Missouri Democrat.

The elder James Gordon Bennett, who knew good newspaper work at sight, sent Stanley to describe the opening of the Suez Canal—with by-the-way assignments all over the East. As a correspondent with the British expedition against Theodore of Ethiopia, Stanley scored a world-beat by his account of Magdala's fall. So Bennett, jr., dispatched him to find Livingstone.

It seems odd today that then the world of 1872 should have regarded the return of H. M. as a later world regarded Dr. Cook; but it did—till H. M. produced Livingstone's journals. There were, for a time, even some folk who doubted Stanley's later crossing of Africa from the Indian Ocean to the Atlantic. At first Leopold of Belgium alone shared the vision H. M. gained there and, dreaming of an empire in the Congo Basin, sought his help. But was Stanley the King's dupe? Not long—and never entirely.

H. M.'s last African adventure proved to be the most controversial of his adventurous and controversial career: the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha, isolated by the Mahdist revolt of the eighties. The plain fact is that Emin didn't want to be relieved. The little thing that he wanted was to be firmly established in control of a territory which he couldn't hold alone, and the command of troops which he couldn't keep in hand without help. While the cloud of his enemies grew daily darker, he mixed diplomacy with strategy. The cloud broke, and the disaster to Stanley's rearguard resulted. Mr. Hird—whose book, published by Stanley Paul, in London, is the "authorized" biography of its subject—makes it abundantly clear that no fault attached to H. M.

H. M. went back to Wales, to Parliament and to marry lovely Dorothy Tennant. H. M.: his other names nobody now associates with him, but on his tomb at Pirbright there appears, under the name the whole world knows, the name he won in Africa—Bula Matari.

People still read his books of exploration and travel: "How I Found Livingstone," "In Darkest Africa," "My Early Travels in America and Asia." But why—oh, why—have boys ceased to read his boys' book, "My Kalula, Prince, King and Slave"?

Fair Enough

Good Old Days Recalled.

New York, Aug. 14.

IT would embarrass me to be caught in the act of longing for the good old days of Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge, but mention of the more abundant life which Mr. Roosevelt bespeaks for the Forgotten Man of this country recalls to mind a period of such opulence and luxury as can hardly be equaled in modern history. Of course, it was a case of chicken today and feathers tomorrow, but the chicken was good while it lasted and Mr. Roosevelt will have done well if at the end of his reign he has managed to re-establish the conditions of life which existed up to the time that the country found itself fresh out of chicken.

It will serve as an illustration to point out that up to Mr. Harding's time there were about 2,000 golf courses in the country and that the new country club set was a rather snobbish group, mainly employers and executives, who were imitating the old aristocratic country club set which first imported golf from Scotland. After the war there was a rapid multiplication of little millionaires and a great exodus to the suburbs of all the cities where promoters plowed up old truck farms and dahlia plantations, put in streets, sewers and lights and constructed houses by the thousands. The little millionaires ranged in size from $3,000 a year in the smaller industrial cities to $25,000 in New York, Chicago and other places of great size. Some of the houses had swimming pools and thousands of them had bars in which the little millionaires and their guests could get drunk in the true baronial manner.

• • • •

SUCH was the demand for the abundant life and such the abundance from which to provide it that presently there were almost 5,000 golf courses of one kind or another scattered over the country and a sprig of parsley couldn't find room to grow within 15 miles of any city hall in the land. There is significance in the growth of golf because it had been the exclusive game of the rich dude for many years and its sudden spread admitted hundreds of thousands of people to a realm from which they had been barred before. Great clubhouses were built, including some shocking architectural monstrosities; people began to experience servants who had never been waited on before and the appetite for caviar became so democratic that toward the end of the era of wonderful nonsense an imitation caviar was being sold in small dabs in the 5-and-10s.

The abundance was to be observed in the styles and customs of the people.

Where, previously, sports costumes, male and female, had been the regalia of the Newport rich and the Palm Beach rich alone, now the manufacturers began to provide the regimentals of ease and elegant informality for the Common Man, him and his. Where, formerly, the Forgotten Man had done his domestic drinking in quick, sly nibbles down the cellar and had kept his pint hidden in the coal bin or the wood pile, there now appeared in the store and in the American home the cocktail outfit, and, in many cases, a handy man who mowed the lawn and drove the car, and, putting on a white jacket, became a butler, passing among the gay ladies and gents with a big churn full of bootleg gin and orange juice in one hand and a tray of deviled eggs, anchovies and kindred refined abominations in the other.

• • • •

MEANWHILE, under the guidance of John McEntee Bowman, a Canadian who had first seen New York between the gunsight ears of a jass-mule attached to a baggage dray of which he was the driver, there began to arise chains of hotels done in splendor which make Buckingham Palace look like Hogan's Flop on a cold night in the panic of '07. Inducted into the luxury of these regal hives, where the customer was always right and the bell hops called the humblest tourist "mister," the citizens had a further experience of an abundance, the like of which they had imagined that none but Vanderbilts and Whitneys could ever know. They became great travelers, too, not only in their own land but in Europe, where the American dollar bought a hatful of the local exchange and the hotel registers and the steamship passenger lists would show anyone who took the trouble to examine them that these tourists were not members of some small, select and parasitic minority but the common man and family.

I do not ascribe this abundant life to Mr. Harding or Mr. Coolidge or even to the party of Penrose, Daugherty and Albert E. Fall, but merely recall that abundance existed for a long time, perhaps by mere coincidence, and suggest that another spell of the same starting now would redound to the fame and glory of the party in power.

Wooden Legs

By William Lyon Phelps

THE accomplished American man-of-letters, Reginald Kauffman, in a recent article in The Washington Post, points out in his accustomed brilliant and thought-provocative manner, one of my most glaring sins of omission. In this column, some weeks ago, I wrote about my visit to a factory in Munich where they supply missing legs and arms with artificial ones, that do all the work of nature, with certain advantages of their own.

Now Mr. Kauffman pertinently suggests that I missed, not a wooden, but a golden opportunity—why did I not write an article on the artificial leg in literature? Well, the only reason is that I did not have sense enough to think of it. But I am glad that he not only pointed out my lost opportunity, but supplied an admirable article himself.

• • • •

He reminds us of Silas Wegg in Dickens's "Our Mutual Friend," of John Silver in Stevenson's "Treasure Island," and of the wonderful hook of Dickens' Captain Cuttle.

Now I call upon my readers to supply me with further evidences of the contributions made, not to history, but to fiction, by persons having artificial legs, arms, or something of the kind.

Two famous dramatists of today, Lawrence Stallings and St. John Ervine, have made brilliant successes. When Mr. Ervine was rehearsing his play Jane Clegg, one of the characters says something like this: "When the weather is going to be had, I can always feel it in the leg I lost." When they got to that place in the rehearsal, a voice came out of the dark auditorium: "I know now that isn't true." Once I asked Mr. Ervine which he would prefer, to have both legs and not write books, or to have one leg and write them. "Oh, the answer is easy. I would far rather have only one leg and write books." Then he thought a moment and added, "Still, I do miss that leg."

Now America Begs

Philippines, Which Once Feared Economic Dependence On U. S., Receives Requests From Textile Interests To Protect American Goods From Japanese Competition.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila (By Mail).

EVEN before the inauguration of the Philippine Commonwealth, trade relations between America and the Philippines seem to have already undergone a reversal. About three decades ago, the American Congress established free trade between the two countries over and above the protest of the Philippine Assembly, whose leaders feared the establishment of economic dependence upon the United States. Today it is the Philippine Legislature that is being asked from Washington to protect American goods on the Philippine market against Japanese competition.

The American textile interests are the first to break the precedent. First, they sent direct communications to the Governor General and the Senate President pointing out the plight of American textile products on the local market. Then, Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution in Congress requesting the President of the United States to bring pressure to bear upon the Governor General so that the latter, in turn, might urge the insular legislature to extend relief to an important New England industry. Petitions used to be elevated from Manila to Washington; now they come from Washington to Manila.

• • • •

IF only because the new situation is flattering, local officials appear disposed to comply with the petition. Thus, on July 9, the Governor General sent a special message to the Legislature urging certain readjustments in the local tariff schedules on foreign textiles.

"It is of common knowledge and of serious import to the interests affected," the message read in part, "that in certain categories the growing competition of foreign goods entering the Philippine Islands under existing tariff duties is causing a progressive loss of trade to the United States.

"In the field of textiles alone there has been a decline on a quantity basis from 72 per cent of the total imports in 1932, to 67 per cent in 1933, and 40 per cent in 1934. During the first six months of the current year, the United States' share was 38 per cent of the total. This decline has been so marked as to attract wide attention in the United States, where the condition of the textile trade has assumed a position of exceptional prominence in public discussion and popular interest."

• • • •

JAPAN has been making startling inroads on the Philippine market because it has been able to undersell American goods and because, under the NRA, prices of American goods have materially increased. One of the new phases of the situation is revealed by the American trade commissioner in Manila. "Concentration on improvement in quality," he states in his last monthly report, "has been a notable feature of Japanese competition in the past few months, although goods of very cheap quality are still demanded and supplied." In the future, therefore, American goods may expect greater and continuing competition from Japanese articles.

The local Legislature is eager to protect American goods, although in the case of textiles, the protection, to be adequate, may work hardship on the consuming public.

Some time ago, as a matter of fact, the insular legislature, on its own initiative, started a general overhauling of the tariff rates with a view to protecting American articles to a greater degree. This move was primarily prompted by the growing realization that the American market is indispensable to Philippine exports, and the expectation of obtaining fairer economic terms in the independence law. The attempt, however, fizzled out when the State Department in Washington, then engaged in a general negotiation for reciprocal trade treaties with several nations, frowned upon the local tinkering with the tariff as a form of interference.

• • • •

THE hope for better economic terms during the Commonwealth period has not been given up, hence the ready local response to pressure from Massachusetts and Washington. President Roosevelt has announced that, as soon as the Commonwealth is inaugurated, he will call a Philippine-American trade conference in which the entire commercial relation of the two countries will be adjusted.

The Filipino leaders regard the result of this conference of paramount importance to the future, and believe that whatever relief can now be extended to American goods will bolster up the Philippine position at the forthcoming Roosevelt trade conference.

Aware of this psychological situation, the Governor General opened his special textile message thus: "The adjustment of trade relations between the United States and the Philippine Islands on a basis satisfactory to both countries is a problem of major importance. While in the larger phases this problem will be a subject of future joint study and negotiation, in pursuance of plans recently formulated, the present situation and trend in some segments of this trade are deserving of the immediate attention of the Legislature."

WHILE there is no doubt whatever as to the local official desire to protect American textiles, there remains the question of whether or not this can be done without undue harm to the consuming public. The fact is that the disparity in the costs of American and Japanese textiles is so wide that even Chinese retailers have had to give up the idea of boycotting Japanese articles as the only alternative to going out of business. Japanese textiles are so cheap that, generally speaking, they retail at only a third of the price of similar American articles.

In order to be adequately protective, the local tariff on textiles must be boosted by at least 200 per cent. In other words, the Filipino masses must be made suddenly to pay three times more for their clothing. Whether they will stand for this remains to be seen. Before the State Department nipped the original tariff-boosting movement in the bud, a consumers' league ready to fight increases in local tariff duties had already been formed and has since been functioning.

Record Silver Purchase Fails To Halt Slump

stem the tide with fresh buying, only to give up the task later.

Keelon Hits Act.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—The silver purchase act and the Treasury regulations governing its administration represent the most un-American principles ever introduced into public law, Frank P. Keelon, foreign exchange and bullion broker, said tonight.

In a scathing denunciation of the Administration's silver policy as exemplified in the "silver purchase act of 1934," the statement urged the repeal of the three sections of the act deemed most detrimental to Americans.

"We have deliberately transferred from New York to London the silver market of the world," he said, "robbing Americans of their business and their profit and endowing the foreigner with both business and profit. America's loss is a sheer gain to the other nations."

Glider Train in Record.

Koktebel, U. S. S. R., Aug. 14 (U.P.). A glider train—a plane towing seven gliders—established a new world record today when it remained aloft for 40 minutes at an altitude of 1,500 feet over the Koktebel Airport. The previous glider train record was held by a plane towing five gliders.

About Paris

The Theater Season.

WITH most Paris theaters now closed for their summer recess, it may be of interest to note that the stage season just ended was far from being as disastrous as predicted by those born pessimists who always tell you how and why the theater is breathing its last. As a matter of fact, lengthy runs were fairly numerous during the period from October to July and many a theater closed its doors at the end of last month while the play on its bill was still proving popular.

Most curious about the Paris season was that three of the outstanding successes were translated from the English and a fourth play, also translated from the English, had a successful run in a small Montmartre theater.

• • • •

"TESSA," the French stage-version by Jean Giraudoux of "The Constant Nymph," Margaret Kennedy's romantic novel, was still drawing capacity crowds when it came to an end last month. The adaptation was a masterpiece of fairylike dialogue and stage craftsmanship. M. Giraudoux's light poetical vein was admirably suited to Mrs. Kennedy's novel of child-life in Bohemia. And the Paris public, saturated with the "eternal triangle," took a real pleasure in Tessa's fanciful and sentimental adventures with the extravagant composer, Lewis Dodd.

"Miss Ba" was the French name for Rudolph Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," cleverly adapted into a successful French play by Mme. Charles Neveu, for the inauguration of Mlle. Marie Bell's management at the Ambassadeurs Theater. There, again, the "eternal triangle" was of a different nature as the drama was that of a subdued and sensitive daughter who wants to escape from her hard, egotistic and somewhat Freudian father's domination into the more normal atmosphere of her love for the poet, Robert Browning. The play ran for well over five months.

THE third of the "big" English successes on the French stage this season was Noel Coward's "Private Lives"—frowned upon by English censorship—and admirably adapted into French by Virginia Vernon and Claude-Andre Puget. The adapters' skill in rendering the exceptional vivacity and swiftness of Mr. Coward's dialogue preserved the play's alacrity, sense of humor and gayety so well that it was the theatrical comic feature all winter. As usual, Mr. Coward did not fail his habit of proving the best drawing card of a theatrical season, be it in London, New York or Paris, and he was responsible for another nice run in a small theater in the Free Commune of Montmartre, where his comedy, "Design For Living," was most favorably received under the title of "Serenade a Trois," translated by Jean Bommart.

While only 8 out of the 60 or more Paris theaters, exclusive of the music halls and cabarets, have managed to remain open during the summer season, one of them, the famous Palais Royal, is pinning its hopes on a farcical comedy by Walter W. Ellis, which drew roars of laughter from Londoners and which, they hope, will do the same in Paris with Anglo-American visitors when they see Mme. Neveu's version of it titled "Le Collier du Rajah."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Off the Iron Range Standard.

President Roosevelt is off the iron stove standard. The White House kitchen has been remodeled and equipped with a $5,000 streamline, stainless steel, de luxe electric stove with a battery of burners, grills and ovens that would make George Rector dizzy.

• • • •

It has three ovens, into any one of which Herbert Hoover and Ogden Mills could be placed end to end. And if not, Mr. Roosevelt will return the stove as unsatisfactory.

• • • •

The Executive Mansion now has one of the most completely equipped all-electric kitchens in America. No matter what critics may say of the Democratic Administration, they can't say it hasn't done more for oven roasts than the Republicans ever did.

• • • •

President Roosevelt can bring his coffee to a boil in Washington today in less time than it used to take Harding, Coolidge and Hoover to find a match to light the stove.

• • • •

Franklin D. has put the old-fashioned stove out in the shed with the horse, buggy and Constitution.

• • • •

He has plowed under the iron range and definitely linked up the broader life with the well-cooked pot roast.

• • • •

There probably never has been a stove like this one in the history of modern government. It looks like something worked out in a joint dream by Earl Carroll, Owen D. Young and the designer of those new streamline trains.

• • • •

It's all done by buttons. The President's idea was that if he could open World Series ball games and national conventions by pressing a button, he ought to be able to bake the beans that way.

• • • •

But it's going to make the Forgotten Man feel pretty jealous as he tries to warm over a forgotten egg on a forgotten stove.

• • • •

The stove is capable of cooking a dinner for 150 people in record time. But if they're Republicans they will still have to wait.

• • • •

Come on up and see it some time, members of the Supreme Court. The New Dealers would like to be sure it's constitutional before they bake a cake.

Br-rrr!

Dr. Ralph S. Willard, of California, says it is possible to stick a human being in an ice box for months and take him out alive and with no bad results. Other than a little confusion in his own mind at first as to whether he is a bottle of milk or a leftover lamb chop.

A Volunteer.

Elmer Twitchell today offered to submit himself to Dr. Willard's test and go into the ice box for six months. "It can't hurt me," he declared. "I'm a Republican and I've just returned from a visit to Washington."

Text of Roosevelt Statement

The statement issued by the President upon signing the social security bill yesterday follows:

Today a hope of many years standing is in large part fulfilled. The civilization of the past hundred years, with its startling industrial changes, has tended more and more to make life insecure. Young people have come to wonder what would be their lot when they came to old age. The man with a job wondered how long the job would last.

This social security measure gives at least some protection to 30,000,000 of our citizens who will reap direct benefits through unemployment compensation, through old-age pensions and through increased services for the protection of children and the prevention of ill-health.

We can never insure 100 per cent of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life, but we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-ridden old age.

This law, too, represents a cornerstone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete—a structure intended to lessen the force of possible future depressions, to act as a protection to future administrations of the Government against the necessity of going deeply into debt to furnish relief to the needy—a law to flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and of inflation—in other words, a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide for the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness.

I congratulate all of you ladies and gentlemen, all of you in the Congress, in the executive departments, and all of you who come from private life, and I thank you for your splendid efforts in behalf of this sound, needed and patriotic legislation.

If the Senate and the House of Representatives in this long and arduous session had done nothing more than pass this bill, the session would be regarded as historic for all time.

ture which is being built but is by no means complete—a structure intended to lessen the force of possible future depressions." He estimated that 30,000,000 citizens would reap direct benefits through the proposed unemployment compensation, old-age pensions and protection of chidren and the prevention of ill health.

Board to Be Named.

Earlier in the day the President said he hoped to be able to appoint the three-member Social Security Board, which will administer the new legislation, before Congress adjourns. Among those mentioned as possible appointees to the board are Edwin A. Witte, secretary of the President's commission which formulated the social security program and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Josephine Roche.

At the same time the President told his press conference he was anxious that widespread publicity be given to his approval of the legislation. Despite this, however, newspaper correspondents found themselves barred from the Cabinet room during the signing ceremony. They had to depend on a "hand-out" giving the text of the President's speech and on cameramen to find out what had happened.

More Taxes Seen.

Details of the social security act were outlined in The Post Saturday morning after the measure was sent to the White House. Its importance, however, is indicated by the fact that without doubt it imposes greater taxation on industry and on employes than any measure ever enacted.

Through a system of graduated assessments for old-age pensions and unemployment benefits pay rolls starting in 1949 will be subject to an annual tax of 6 per cent, while employes will pay 3 per cent of their salaries. It is estimated that by 1980 the old-age pension fund will amount to the stupendous sum of $46,000,000,000.

An appropriation of $95,000,000 has been made by Congress for this year to launch the social security program.

Air-Mail Bill Signed.

The President also signed the new air-mail bill yesterday. Among other things, it gives the Interstate Commerce Commission jurisdiction over rates, provided the contractor supplies satisfactory service. It also permits variation of the pay rate between the present 33 1-3 cents a mile upward to a 40-cent absolute top.

Henceforth, under the new law, the Postmaster General is to establish not less than three primary or transcontinental routes and such secondary routes as he sees fit, but not to aggregate more than 32,000 miles or 45,000,000 airplaine miles a year. He may extend a route 250 miles without new competitive bids.

Contractors who held air-mail contracts previously ruled unlawful are barred from further mail carrying. No contractor may have more than one primary and three secondary routes. Present contractors may continue service subject to satisfactory performance.

Saito and Phillips Discuss Principles

Japanese Envoy Hopeful of Pleasant Relations.

By the Associated Press.

Hope that no more "unpleasant" incidents would arise to mar relations between Japan and the United States was expressed by Hirosi Saito, the Japanese Ambassador, after a conference yesterday with William Phillips, Undersecretary of State.

The ambassador told newsmen that he had not protested nor made representations at the State Department against the burlesque skit in which a Seattle, Wash., club member recently impersonated the Mikado.

Saito said, however, he had discussed the "principles" involved in caricatures.

Recently he protested formally to this Government against a cartoon in Vanity Fair magazine lampooning the Japanese emperor. Replying, Secretary Hull expressed regret that the humorous idea behind the cartoon had been misunderstood.

Conferees Deadlocked Over Death Sentence

By the Associated Press.

Conferees seeking to reconcile differences between the House and Senate on the utility holding company bill appeared so far from agreement regarding the compulsory abolition issue yesterday that a scheduled meeting was called off.

This immediately revived speculation at the Capitol as to whether there is any chance of completing the legislation at this session of Congress.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the conferees shook his head in evident discouragement when reporters asked him whether he held out hope of an agreement. He called another meeting of the conferees today, however.

Red Cross Sends China $100,000 Flood Aid

By the Associated Press.

Expressing deep concern and regret over loss of life in flood-stricken areas along the Yangtse and Yellow Rivers, the American Red Cross yesterday sent $100,000 to the Chinese government.

The gift was made for the relief of suffering and famine in flood sectors. Red Cross officials described the number of homeless in these areas as "appalling."

The donation was in Chinese currency.

Senate Crushes Move to Delay Vote on Taxes

Proposal to Postpone Action Until Next Session Defeated, 55-19.

"I do not propose to try to delay the passage of this bill," Hastings said. "I do not propose to try to amend it. I want it to stand out as one of the Roosevelt accomplishments. I want those who agree with him to put their stamp of approval upon it. I hope those who disagree with him will have the courage to vote against it."

Most Republicans took the Hastings position of general opposition to the bill as a whole, with little disposition to offer perfecting amendments. But on the Democratic side there were amendments, and to spare—so many in fact that leaders who had hoped for passage of the bill by tomorrow night were a bit restrained in their optimism.

Silver Issue Is Up.

The controversial silver issue will be injected today by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, with an amendment striving to eliminate 50 per cent profits tax on silver transactions. McCarran will offer the substance of a bill already reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee, which also repeals nationalization provisions of the silver purchase act, and seeks to establish an open market for silver. The Nevadan insisted there is no question as to the germaneness of his proposal.

Simultaneously, it was learned that an independent move will be made by the Senate silver bloc for an investigation of the Treasury's silver purchase policies.

Proposed Amendments.

Other proposed amendments include the low-bracket surtax schedules originally offered in the Finance Committee by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, and again submitted to the Senate yesterday by the diminutive Progressive; and a proposal by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to tax securities now tax-exempt.

A feeling among conservative Democrats that the bill is too severe on business and corporate interests is expected to result in some proposals to modify the Finance Committee's graduated corporation income tax and the proposed levy on intercorporate dividends.

Chairman Pat Harrison himself will offer amendments scaling down the severity of the House inheritance tax schedules, particularly as they affect inherited business enterprises and insurance passed on to heirs. But Harrison will move only in the unexpected event that the House inheritance rates are substituted for the Finance Committee's proposed estates taxes.

Aside from a routine explanation of the bill by Senator Harrison yesterday, there were no Democratic speeches in defense. The leadership's strategy is to discourage oratorical efforts wherever possible, in the interest of speedy action. They appeared satisfied with the huge Democratic majority run up yesterday on the Vandenberg test.

In his attack on the bill, preceding his motion to recommit, Vandenberg called the measure "bungling, budgetary burlesque."

Not for Revenue.

"We chatter about revenue in millions while we confront deficits in billions," said the Michigan Senator. "This is sheer tax sophistry. • • • It lacks any element of the prudence for which the President assumes to speak. But it does have one virtue. It does prove to the average citizen of modest means that the heaviest possible taxes which may be accumulated from the rich, as proposed in the bill, even when augmented by increased burdens in the lower brackets, will not remotely pay the present bills for our Gargantuan expenditures."

Vandenberg said it was "merely indecent flirtation with the problem" to rely on the bill now before the Senate. Hurling an epithet a minute, he called the bill "a fiscal fiasco," a "sham tax bill," "a sop to the real redistributors," "insufferable scandal and outrage," "a mere punitive proposition" and "midsummer madness."

The minority committee report filed by Metcalf and Hastings was no less outspoken. The only argument advanced in support of the bill, declared the report, is that "the President wants it."

"The bill is avowedly based solely upon 'share the wealth' and 'social control' fantasies, and the raising of revenues, if any will be raised, is admittedly incidental," said Metcalf and Hastings.

"The enactment of the bill is directly contrary to the President's recommendations in his annual budget, and no budget estimates have been submitted upon which a revenue measure may be based."

They answered the demand for speed with the statement that no possible new revenues can result in the present year, and the new taxes could only become wholly effective as a revenue measure in the 1938 fiscal year.

Recovery Hampered.

"Leave business alone," the minority report warned. "Substantial progress toward industrial recovery and normal business activities and economic conditions is being made, notwithstanding constant, continuous hampering and interference resulting from the unsound and untested experiments imposed by the present Administration.

"A removal of the obstacles and a cessation of the threats are all that is now necessary. Healthy business conditions will do more to restore revenues and relieve unemployment than all the fanciful theories advocated by the President and his advisers."

The report said present revenue laws probably will produce sufficient revenues if "extravagance and waste" in Government expenditures are eliminated.

Germany Acts To Keep Prices Under Control

Schacht Orders Steps Take to Prevent Unjustified Increases.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 14. — Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic dictator of the Third Reich, took a hand himself today in the fight against mounting prices by ordering price supervising officers to prevent every unjustified rise.

An official communique said Schacht, minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, had instructed the supervisors "to watch the development of prices most carefully, see that general orders concerning prices be lived up to exactly, and strictly prevent all infractions of price orders as well as every unjustified rise in prices."

Army sources scoffed at a report from a Vienna newspaper that an early military or Reichswehr dictatorship in Germany was expected. They said the army has never played politics, and never will.

Army Satisfied.

To the contrary, it was asserted, Army officials are satisfied under National Socialism, since there is more money available for military purposes and more enthusiasm for rearmament than under any other system of government conceivable for Germany.

The drive against Jews extended to all parts of the country. Results will be summed up here tomorrow night in a speech by Julius Streicher, leader of the anti-Semitic fight, in the huge Sportpalast. Every seat has been sold.

Reports from Dortmund said even school children were engaging in anti-Jewish manifestations by sneaking up behind persons coming out of Jewish shops and pinning cards to them reading: "I am a traitor to my people, because I bought from a Jew."

Ten more members of Roman Catholic organizations were placed on trial on a charge of violating currency laws. They were three Brothers of Mercy of Montabur Monastery atnd seven sisters of the Order of the Good Shepherd.

Sentenced to Prison.

One of the sisters was sentenced to four months' imprisonment and fined 900 marks (about $360), and the six other sisters were ordered to pay fines ranging from 1,200 to 4,500 marks.

[Stuttgart dispatches to the United Press reported that officials in the nearby town of Ebingen warned local Salvation Army workers "for failure to salute a passing swastika and for giving evidence of their disrespect for the Nazi flag by derisive laughter."]

A Jewish physician, Ferdinand Goldstein, was arrested in Berlin on a charge of performing illegal operations. At Konstanz, another Jewish physician, Martin Hagelberg, was taken to a concentration camp accused of victimizing "dozens of women and girls."

Large billboards were erected in Hanover admonishing all Germans to stay away from Jews, and in Oldenberg Jewish tradesmen were informed they were not wanted at the market.

In Dortmund Jews were prohibited from taking objects of value to public pawnshops or from participating in auctions at the pawnshops. A Jewish butcher in Duisburg was sentenced to four years' imprisonment for alleged relations with a 20-year-old girl employe.

Offenders Punished.

Provincial reports again gave evidence that the scarcity of meat and other essential articles of food is being used by merchants as an excuse for raising prices. Orders issued by local party bosses and government officials indicated the offenders are being punished severely.

That overzealous Nazis are likely to cause difficulties for tourists was indicated by public notices here and in Cologne to the effect that: "Foreigners must under no circumstances leave molested because they failed to give the Hitler salute."

The Massachusetts House of Representatives' resolution condemning "abhorrent" Nazi persecutions raised the ire of Nazis today.

The newspaper Angriff, under the headline, "Hypocritical Impudence," said editorially on its front page:

"It is a case of seeing a splinter in a neighbor's eye and no beam in your own. We do not hang Jews who attack women; we do not lynch men of another race; we do not indulge in shameful excesses such as characterize the strikes in the United States.

"To us, the Boston structures appear clownish and not motivated by a sense of moral responsibility, but simply hollow bumptiousness."

Nazi Campaign Nipped

Geneva, Aug. 14 (AP).—League of Nations records disclosed today that the Union of South Africa took steps to prevent a German Nazi campaign in Southwest Africa.

The records are part of the proceedings of the mandate commission which is concerned with the former German colony in Southwest Africa now under mandate to the Union. The territory, now known as Southwest Africa, was formerly German Southwest Africa. A mandate was established December 17, 1920.

A representative of the Union told the mandate commission that a Nazi campaign directed from Germany had asked the German population in the territory to pledge its allegiance to "the leaders in Germany."

He said that because of this Nazi activity, non-German settlers in the region had started a movement to have the territory incorporated in the Union as a fifth province, an act which would be tantamount to its annexation.

The Union informed the League of Nations that such action would not be permitted.

Welcome Extended to Chile Scout Delegates

The 1935 pony express—which is netither pony nor express—will reach Washington next Wednesday with mail for President Roosevelt.

The express was planned as an adjunct of the Boy Scouts jamboree here and intended by Boy Scouts of Western States as a sort of revival of the mail-carrying methods of their grandfathers in the days when Millard Fillmore was President.

From Oregon to St. Joseph, Mo., the Scouts rode horses. Then they got in airplanes. From Washington Airport to the White House they will be escorted by a band, a covered wagon, Senator King, of Utah, and a delegation from the Oregon Trail Association.

Though the jamboree was canceled last week, officials in charge of the "pony express" decided that the President's mail must go through.

D. C. Officials Again Hit Deeds' Building Plan

Disapproval of construction of a separate building for the housing of the office of the recorder of deeds again was expressed by the District Commissioners yesterday in a report to the House.

It was the third time this session of Congress the Commissioners have disapproved the proposal of William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, to have his office housed in a separate building. General construction plans, they said in their letter to Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the House District Committee, provide adequately for housing the office.

Self-Help Parley.

Plans for the future of the self-help movement in Washington will be considered at the first convention of the Central Council of Self-Help Co-operators of the District to be held tonight in the Garnet Patterson Junior High School, Vermont avenue and V street northwest.

The session will be open. Benjamin T. Montgomery is president of the organization.

War Materials Raise Exports Of U. S. Sharply

Raw Products to Europe Show $6,800,000 Gain in June.

By the Associated Press.

Gains in international trade in war materials and an unusual June increase in United States exports of raw products to Europe were disclosed yesterday by Commerce Department figures.

The export gain in June broke a long series of declines in United States sales to European countries. The armament figures showed a fairly steady increase over the past 30 months in the world trade of several nations.

Particularly noticeable in the war shipment category was the record gain of United States exports of cotton linters, which are short cotton fibres especially valuable for manufacturing explosives, and the similar record movement of scrap iron and steel, major war raw material.

Exports Up $6,800,000.

Total June exports to Europe increased $6,800,000 to $69,380,000 and some $4,300,000 of this increase consisted of raw materials going to Germany, Italy and France.

Statistics were not available to disclose exactly what was purchased by these countries. Sales of foodstuffs and raw cotton, however, were believed to have declined, which would indicate an increase in metal and chemical materials.

Japan and Italy were noticeable especially as major customers over the past several months for linters, scrap metal and important chemicals suitable for war use. France also bought more linters and chemicals.

Arms Sales Gaining.

United States exports of arms and ammunition, while not large, gained noticeably in 1934 over 1933, and were continuing to gain in the first half of this year. South American countries were the major customers for these products. Russia, Germany and China bought many airplanes and airplane engines.

The June export gain to Europe marked the first time in many months when the current month has exceeded the same month of the previous year. Europe had been declining steadily as this Nation's major customer until June.

Officials declined to predict whether an upward trend in sales to Europe was commencing or to estimate if war preparations were responsible for the June gains.

Loafed Since '84, Park Bencher Says

"When," asked the court, "did you work last?"

Cavanaugh scratched his chin for a moment, and then replied: "I think I had my last job in 1884."

Flood Dead Put At 250 as Italy Rushes Relief

Toll Likely to Increase as Troops Dig Out Bodies; Damage $25,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Alessandria, Italy, Aug. 14.—Fascist Blackshirt troops and regular army soldiers sloshed through 43 square miles of tragic mud tonight, fighting a peace-time battle to relieve hundreds of inhabitants marooned by the Lake Orsiglieto flood.

Officials estimated that 250 persons were killed when the powerhouse dam near Ovada burst. Many of the bodies have not been recovered. The 15,000,000 cubic meters of water stored behind the dam wreaked nearly $25,000,000 worth of damage to buildings and crops. First-aid stations were crowded with the hurt and sick.

Temporary Bridges.

Estimates as to the number of dead ran originally as high as 1,000, and rescue working officials said they believed the final total, after the wreckage has been thoroughly explored, would run much higher than the 250 dead listed officially.

To aid the work of succor, army engineer battalions are laying temporary roads and bridges through the valley. Four bridges were wiped out by the floods.

King Victor Emmanuel went into the area from his summer home near Turin to give his consolations to his stricken subjects.

Premier Mussolini ordered every resource of the Fascist militia, the army and the civil government to deliver aid to the sufferers.

The watchman at the Ovada dam was one of those killed. An investigation showed that when he heard the rush of waters down the mountain, following a cloudburst, he ran to open the discharge valves on the dam in an effort to lessen the shock of the rising tide of waters.

Even as he twisted frantically on the valve control the dam gave way and the huge wall of water, many feet high, burst out upon the valley.

The watchman, his family, and his house were overwhelmed. The waters raced out for 32 miles down the valley. In its first plunge, the water dropped 125 feet to the valley below the dam.

Among the dead are supposed to be a number of wealthy persons from Genoa who made the mountain region their summer resort.

Ethiopia Asks League to End Ban on Arms

Rome, and war breaks out, the United Press said these nations will go before the League of Nations in September and place full responsibility for hostilities on Italy.]

Eden is firmly against granting Italy political domination of Ethiopia but, it was said, his proposed economic concessions to Mussolini are sufficiently broad to furnish a basis for settlement.

A system of capitulations such as formerly existed in China and Turkey is understood to have been one British suggestion. Foreign consuls already have certain extraterritorial powers in Ethiopia, but the plan would be vastly expanded, especially for Italy.

Not Seeking New Rights.

Neither France nor England is seeking economic rights under the three-power 1906 treaty with Italy which divided Ethiopia into spheres of influence.

Mussolini, British circles understood, is rather favorable to such a plan, but his delegate, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, is expected to tell Laval tomorrow of further demands, which Eden may reject. Laval, as mediator, then will try to harmonize their stands.

When and if the three powers evolve a settlement it remains for Laval, with British support to induce Emperor Haile Selassie to swallow the dose.

While the three powers discuss the main issue, the arbitration commission also will sit to try to settle the dispute. Since its decision may influence the Italian position, Aloisi today went to see Nicholas Politis, of Greece, who will be appointed as fifth arbitrator Friday.

2,000 New Troops Sail

Rome, Aug. 14 (AP).—The steamship Gange, carrying 2,000 troops, many officers and war supplies, sailed tonight for East Africa. Premier Mussolini ordered all men of the military reserve classes of 1911, 1913 and 1914 to report for further duty. Several thousand are affected.

Newspapers took offense at what they called a "menacing British attitude" disclosed in conservative London newspapers.

The Giornale d'Italia, discussing the London Times' statements on the tri-power conference in Paris, said "these British menaces against Italy are words of encouragement for Ethiopian insolence.

"Italy will not tolerate this pointing of a dagger at her throat," said the paper. "Such menaces can not fail to resolve themselves into the supreme duty by Italy to make her position all the more rigid."

Selassie Rushes Arms

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 14.—Emperor Haile Selassie tonight drove ahead with his plans to strengthen Ethiopia's northern defenses against the Italian threat.

It was reported that a huge train of donkeys and camels, loaded with arms and ammunition, will start north from here tomorow, headed for the frontier territories.

Light was thrown on possible Ethiopian war plans by an unconfirmed report that Haile Selassie already had begun construction of a railroad from Harrar by way of Djigdjiga to British Somaliland, thus giving the interior a second rail link with the seacoast in the event the French railway line to Djibouti is cut off.

Italian Credit May End

London, Aug. 14 (AP).—British exporters hinted today at a move to refuse further credits to Italy because of delayed payments attributed to the expense of the military preparations. It was reported in financial circles that Italy's debt to British importers is £2,000,000 (about $10,000,000), and the creditors may lead manufacturers in the curb of further credit.

Many exporters, especially coal shippers, already have shut down on sales to Italy until overdue payments are made, but that merely shunted the Italian demand to Germany.

The belief was expressed in some quarters that Italy may utilize some of its gold reserve to pay up in order to clear the credit atmosphere. Foreign financial circles reported that Italian firms were trying to negotiate extended credit in Paris.

Ship Plant Strikers, Miss Perkins Confer

A delegation representing striking workers at the Camden, N. J., plant of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation met last night with Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to discuss the arbitration plan proposed by the Labor and Navy Departments.

Officials were hopeful of an early end of the strike that has involved some 3,000 workers for 14 weeks and has delayed construction on five naval vessels costing $50,000,000. Earlier in the day Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt predicted the Government's arbitration plan would be accepted soon.

is discussing its very existence as an independent state."

Lloyd George invited his hearers to compare the authority and prestige of the League when the present British government came into power with its authority now. He said the League had been flouted by Japan, Germany, "even Bolivia and Paraguay and now by Italy."

The object of the League Covenant, he asserted, was to prevent war but "Mussolini said, 'if the League is brought in I do not appear.' They accepted that and they wiped out the League as an authority on peace and war."

"Whenever we complain in the House of Commons (on the Ethiopian situation, the government says: 'What would you do now?'

"I know what we would have done if they had not let the League of Nations down, if its authority had not been completely trampled upon.

"It is no use when you have a blunted, notched and cracked sword, until it is almost worthless in your hands, to turn around and say: 'What will you do now with that sword.'

"Unfortunately, there is only one thing to do. That is to put it in a furnace and recast it—they have so completely destroyed its power."

State Attempts To Refute Stor Of MacDonald

California Referee Dispute 'Perjured' Testimony of Mooney Witness.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 14.—The State of California today began its efforts to refute an aged man's sworn testimony that he perjured himself in 1917 in identifying Thomas J. Mooney, Sna Quentin life termer, as the man who timed the preparedness Day parade bomb which killed 10 people.

The witness is John MacDonald, 63-year-old paralyzed City Hospital patient here who testified under oath yesterday that he perjured himself at the original Mooney trial. His testimony is being given here before a special referee named by the California Supreme Court.

The court will receive the testimony for use in consideration of Mooney's petition for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain his freedom.

William Cleary, deputy attorney general for California, spent most of the day hammering away at MacDonald on cross-examination. The hearing frequently was interrupted by clashes between Cleary and John Finerty and George Davis, Mooney attorneys.

Finerty accused Cleary on several occasions of "misleading" and "bulldozing" MacDonald. Cleary, in turn, charged that Finerty was "testifying for the witness."

Points ontested.

Cleary's cross-examination today centered about these points:

MacDonald's testimony on four occasions as to the time of his arrival at Steuart and Market street in San Francisco—scene of the explosion.

The fact that he has testified on all occasions that the parade had not started when he arrived.

The length of time after his arrival that he saw a man place a suitcase—which contained the bomb—near a saloon.

Whether MacDonald had informed police officers, before the trial of either Mooney or Warren K. Billings, who also received a life term, that he did not identify pictures of Mooney and Billings as being those of the men involved in placing the bomb.

Whether Charles Fickert, then district attorney, and Edward Cunha, then an assistant district attorney, had "coached" MacDonald to change his testimony as to the time of his arrival on the scene. MacDonald testified yesterday the officials told him to change his testimony at the Mooney trial from tnat given at the Billings trial.

after he gave his information to San

Wther Mac Donald, several days Francisco police, told George Reed, a Salvation Army man, that he had identified the pictures of Mooney and Billings as being those of the two wanted men.

MacDonald's testimony here is being checked by Cleary against three other sets of sworn testimony given by the witness in the bombing trials.

Post-NRA Wage Cuts Are Laid to 12,000

By the Associated Press.

NRA observers have reported to headquarters that some 12,000 to 13,000 American employers have cut wages or increased hours or both since the old Blue Eagle met its death.

The figures are not official as yet and authorities decline to attach significance to them publicly on the ground that too few companies have been covered and that more time is needed to develop any trends fully.

It was said that the bulk of the wage cutting and hour increasing is among smaller firms.

NRA Blue Eagles Are Just 'Waste Paper' Now

By the Associated Press.

NRA emblems and other material connected with the Blue Eagle era are so much waste paper now to the Postoffice Department.

In a letter to postmasters, titled "Co-operation With the National Recovery Administration," W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, yesterday directed that all NRA material be removed from bulletin boards, that re-employment agreements, certificates and similar materials be forwarded to State heads, and "all other NRA material be destroyed or disposed of as waste paper."

House Rejects Changes By Senate in Liquor Bill

The House yesterday rejected Senate amendments to the new Federal alcohol control bill and appointed members to seek adjustment of differences in conference with representatives of the other chamber.

Those named are Representatives Doughton, of North Carolina; Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, and Cullen, of New York, Democrats, and Treadway, of Massachusetts, and Bacharach, of New Jersey, Republicans.

Wife Near Collapse After Slaying

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Enraged Wife Kills Her Rival In Love Tangle

Husband's Affections for Young Blonde Leads to N. Y. Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—Enraged by her husband's avowals of love for his pretty blonde secretary, Mrs. Etta Reisman, 35, shot and killed the girl early today. She was arrested on a charge of murder.

The shooting occurred in the driveway of the Reisman home in the Beechhurst section of Queens while the husband, prosperous operator of a chain of beauty shops, and his 23-year-old daughter by a previous marriage looked on.

Miss Virginia Seigh, 23, the secretary, who had lived with the couple for seven years, died almost immedately with a bullet wound in the breast. Mrs. Reisman's stepdaughter, Annette, was wounded in the hand when she attempted to seize the weapon.

As police reconstructed the affair, Arthur Reisman, 42, informed his wife yesterday that he was in love with his secretary and would pay Mrs. Reisman $30 a week if she would give him a separation.

Early this morning he drove into the driveway, but refused to leave his car. He had been drinking.

His daughter and Miss Seigh, both clad in pajamas, went out and tried to persuade him to come in. From an open window, Mrs. Reisman heard him mutter:

"I love Virginia and Virginia loves me."

Taking her husband's pistol from its holster near the bed, she went out and began shooting.

Then she went back into the house and sat down. When police arrived she was sobbing hysterically.

Hours later Mrs. Reisman, who married the beauty shop operator 12 years ago and bore him a son, Arthur, jr., now 9, was half-carried into magistrate's court for arraignment on a first-degree murder charge.

She was held without bail for hearing August 21.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Police Quiz Kin Of Slain Man, Seeking Motive Gun Murder of Chicago Park District Official Is Puzzling Case.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Police tonight sought from relati[illegible] and friends some hint to a motive for the slaying of Kenneth Morrison, 46, assistant comptroller of the Chicago Park District.

Morrison's body, pierced by three bullets, was found at daybreak in the rear seat of his automobile, which had been standing for hours near a Northwest Side elevated station. Contents of his pockets were strewn about and a cigarette had burned down to his lips. Police discarded a robbery theory when they found about $25 in his pockets.

The weapon with which bullets were fired into his right cheek, his chest, above the heart, and into his abdomen, was gone. Police theorized that the small amount of blood in the car indicated the park official had been slain elsewhere and his body moved to the place where his car was abandoned.

Wife Reports to Police.

Morrison's wife, Ethelwyn, reported him missing this morning. She said her husband always had been regular in his habits and that when he failed to return from work last night she became worried. Three children by a former marriage also survive him.

A member of a prominent Winnipeg, Canada, family, Morrison had come to Chicago several years ago and obtained a position with the Park District. He worked his way to his $5,400 yearly salary as a civil service employe.

Records at his office indicated he had been there until about 10 p. m. yesterday.

Bottle Found.

Police said a small bottle of skin-renewing preparation found on the running board of the car probably was used by the slayers in an effort to avoid fingerprints. Residents near where the death car was found said they saw two men running from it about 11:30 p. m. yesterday.

Park District officials said Morrison had a record without a blemish and had been working late at night on special tasks. His father, who died recently, was a member of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange many years.

Baltimore Mills Restore Code Fixed by NRA

Clothing Workers to Have 36-Hour Week Until June of 1937.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 14.—Agreements guaranteeing NRA hours and minimum wages were signed here today by employer and employe representatives of the clothing industry.

All clothing factories were closed here today as 5,000 unionized workers met to effect the agreement with manufacturer contractors.

When the shops reopen tomorrow, the same wages and hours provided by the now invalid NRA code for the clothing industry will be in effect.

The agreement will continue through June, 1937, with a 36-hour week and manufacturers' operating rates sufficient to guarantee the workers the minimum NRA wage.

The contract marked the end of two months of negotiations between employer and employe representatives and averted a possible strike.

The contract was signed this afternoon by Benjamin Lebow, president, and Meyer Kushnick, manager, of the Baltimore Clothing Manufacturers' Association, and Meyer Blumberg, national vice president, and Ulisse de Dominicis, local branch manager of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Preston Ends 38 Years' Work As Senate Aid

Former Press Gallery Head Resigns Library Post for Archives Job.

After more than 38 years at the Capitol, James D. Preston, who as superintendent of the Senate press gallery and later as Senate librarian has seen 19 Congresses come and go, yesterday tendered his resignation to become assistant to the administrative secretary of the national archives.

An intimate of every Senator and a friend to all newspapermen who have "covered" the Capitol since the beginning of the century, Preston's new job will be one of assimilating and dispensing to the interested public a wealth of information culled from the archives.

His resignation as Senate librarian was handed yesterday to Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary to the Senate.

"When I left the press gallery to enter the library and you gave me access to the files of the Senate, unwittingly you encouraged my interest in historical documents," he wrote Halsey.

Seeks Wider Field.

"My enthusiasm was thus stimulated, an enthusiasm which now desires even greater opportunities for this kind of activity. Dr. (R. D. W.) Connor, archivist of the United States, has provided these opportunities * * *"

Col. Halsey, who also served an apprenticeship in the Senate press gallery, replied with an expression of "the regret and sorrow of the many friends you have gained through long association and efficient service."

"The Archives gain is the Senate's loss," Halsey's letter of acceptance read. "No one can completely fill your place and it is much regretted that your valuable services will no longer be directly available. * * * We are pleased to know that in transferring your activities, you have found an endeavor in which you will be pleasantly associated, and that you are eminently fitted for the duties you are to perform."

Ferrets Out Messages.

Preston, who is plain "Jim" to Senators and newspapermen, entered the Senate press gallery as a messenger March 25, 1897. Later the office of gallery superintendent was established and Preston held it until December, 1931, when he became Senate librarian.

Preston accepted the librarian's job at a reduction in salary, for he wanted the opportunity to browse among the rare historical documents hid away in the Senate attic. Messages from every President since Washington, many in the scrawling, long-hand of another day, were ferreted from the attic, bound and preserved for posterity. Last summer Preston made a trip to England at his own expense to study library methods of the famous British museum. Many of these he quickly adapted to his own use in the Senate library.

His hobby is collecting rare water marks and he sends to the ends of the earth for them.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXXI—Round-Up of Blood.

Always obliging, Pat Reilly paid his check and led the way to the doctor's house, where Eddie Green explained that these men were "a couple of fellows who had gotten into a shooting scrape." Both were shot in the back; one was in extreme pain and sick from his wound. Evidently the doctor didn't care for them as patients, for he provided only superficial treatment. Evidently, also, the patients did not see in him the true makings of a hoodlum doctor, for they did not return. There is some evidence that they went to a place near Chicago, where they were treated by a man who knew his business, an eccentric genius both at surgery and crookedness. An ex-convict from Joliet Penitentiary, he was at his surest and best only when roaring drunk, and objected to operating in any other condition. His specialties were abortions and bullet holes. However, if the St. Paul doctor had displeased his patients, and if the patients displeased the doctor in St. Paul, there was one person who was highly satisfied. That was Pat Reilly. He had reached the top.

These injured men were John Dillinger and John Hamilton, both wounded by gunfire the day previous, during the robbery of the First National Bank at Mason City, Iowa, where the gang had traded two bullet holes for $52,000. Pat Reilly became their eager servant and gobetween, thus, through no fault of his own, serving the cause of justice. But for that matter, so did Eddie Green.

There was quite a shooting scrape on the morning of March 31, 1934, at an apartment house on Lexington avenue in St. Paul. When the acrid odor of machine-gun smoke had cleared, the public learned that John Dillinger and Evelyn Frechette had been "jumped up" by special agents and police.

This had been done by two officers who had been sent to the place merely to investigate a rumor that some questionable characters were living there. As soon as it had been ascertained that the occupants of the apartment were of a dangerous type—even then they were not identified as Dillinger and Frechette—a hurry call had been sent for additional special agents and police.

Dillinger Warned By Arrival of Pal.

Before these reinforcements could arrive and an effort made to force Dillinger's surrender, Homer Van Meter arrived and almost immediately started shooting. Thus Dillinger was warned, and the officers fought not only against odds, but against enemies at widely separated points. The result was that Dillinger, spraying his path with machine-gun fire, escaped, as did Frechette and Van Meter.

After the battle was over, the special agents, seething though they might be that the sheerest kind of luck had played into Dillinger's hands, began to make the most of what remained. They entered the apartment with their dusting powders, their fingerprint cameras and soft rubber "lifters" by which an impression of a fingerprint can be carried away. Also they catalogued every other possible shred of evidence. They found fingerprints which later sent several persons to prison on harboring charges. Then they discovered a telephone number, hastily scribbled on a piece of scrap paper.

They traced the telephone number. It led to an apartment house on Marshall avenue. Special agents went there, heavily armed. No one was at home. A cursory search showed a number of gun clips and ammunition. Their own machine guns in readiness, the special agents awaited the arrival of the occupants. At last a ring at the bell.

"Come in!" they commanded. The door opened to admit two Negro women, who rolled their eyes at the sight of the machine guns and hastily started away.

"Come back here!" they were ordered. They obeyed with rolling eyes.

"All we's doin's is comin' to get some stuff what Mr. Stephens sent us for," one of them argued. The excuse was not accepted. One of the special agents had worked on the Frank Nash, Keating and Holdon case. These women were Leonia Goodman and Lucy Jackson, who had been maids for Charlie Harmon and others in the old Nash-Keating-Holden crowd. There in the apartment they were questioned; at last they confessed that they had been sent here for some clothing by Eddie Green, and that they were to take the suitcase to their home on Rondo street, where it would be called for.

The suitcase was packed. Special agents surrounded the house of the Negro women; that evening a car drove up. Eddie Green went to the door and asked for the case. Immediately special agents challenged him. Eddie whirled with the knowledge that he was trapped. He dropped the suitcase and his right hand slipped toward his automatic. Instantly there was a burst of fire; the man fell, fatally wounded.

By the Associated Press.

The dollar continued yesterday to lower against leading European currencies in principal exchange centers.

In London the dollar was easy at 4.98¼ to the pound, where it was reported that American balances were being offered by the Treasury in connection with its purchases of silver to support the world price. In New York the pound sterling gained ½ cent at $4.98¼, the highest rate since late November, 1934.

The Honkong dollar lost 1.65 cents in New York at 49.30 cents as bar silver prices were lowered in London and New York, the latter price by 1⅛ cents to 65¾ cents an ounce, a new low since April. Shanghai dollar declined .65 of a cent in New York at 36.20 cents.

The French franc advanced .00¼ of a cent in New York at 6.63¾ cents. The dollar was soft in earlier dealings in Paris at the equivalent of 6.637 cents to the franc.

The Federal Diary

By Loren Hall,
Batting for Morgan Baker.

DISSEMINATING information relative to Government departments and Executive orders, the United States Information Service is equipped to give assistance to Federal workers and the public in general.

This agency, which was set up in March, 1934, by the National Emergency Council, has a staff of 25 employes, under the direction of Miss Harriet Root (P), chief.

This trained staff is equipped with charts, indexes and files and is able to supply names, room and telephone numbers of the various agencies, and information as to specific functions. Inquiries are answered in person, by telephone or by mail.

The service also assists all Government departments in serving the public through the proper routing of inquiries and general Federal business.

This agency is located at 1423 F street northwest and the telephone number is District 4030.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has been informed of a new youth G-Man movement. A 12-year-old boy has notified the bureau that he and a number of his friends have formed a group opposed to crime. He has asked that the organization be furnished badges "so that the people of our city can recognize us as an outstanding group of boys."

Patent Office Classes.

Classes in general procedure and other routine matters have been inaugurated at the Patent Office for eight of the recently employed examiners. These classes are intended to give the new employes a fundamental background for advanced work.

Out of 211 A. F. G. E. lodges chartered, 153 have already indicated they will send delegates to the convention in Cincinnati next month, according to Lee Somers, publicity director. Fourteen lodges have reported they will not be able to send delegates, making a total of 167 lodges accounted for.

Heads Power Division.

J. D. Ross, of Seattle, Wash., has accepted the position of chief consulting engineer for the new power division, PWA, and will assume his duties in Washington next week, according to Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

Employes of the Treasury and Commerce Departments will attend the sunset symphony concert in a group next Sunday, according to a Treasury bulletin. Officials of both departments will be guests of honor.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only, between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native;" screen, W. C. Investigation Bureau Postelles.

During the week ended August 1, the number of fingerprint cards received by the Federal Bureau of Investigation averaged 3,701 a day.

C. T. Hudgins, files section, is vacationing at his home in Virginia.

Wade Alley, chief clerk's office, has returned to work after a vacation spent in Dayton, Ohio.

J. D. Homer, files section, has gone to Martinsburg, W. Va., for a two-week vacation.

Miss Dorothy Swartz, chief clerk's office, is vacationing at Virginia Beach.

New Uniforms.

Clothing styles have been revised to restore distinction in field apparel of forest rangers, according to an announcement of the Forest Service. The new uniforms supplant the old forestry green outfit with stiff-brim hats, no longer distinctive of the field men, since similar types of uniforms have been widely adopted by other agencies.

The new coat is loose-cut, single-breasted, two-button style with leather buttons and bellows pockets. The familiar pine-tree badge appears on the lapels. The ranger's wardrobe may include three styles of trousers—straight cut, riding breeches and knickerbockers. Dark tan or cordovan are the specific colors for the boots and shoes.

W. H. Thompson (C), AAA, and his wife are being congratulated on the birth of a son.

N. R. B. expresses the following view about being a loyal American:

"My conception of being a loyal American is to strive to better living and working conditions for all citizens. I know that I owe a certain amount of rest, relaxation and diversion to myself in order to contribute my best to Uncle Sam's service. Moreover, the machine age has deprived so many of work, unless shorter hours are introduced in the Government as well as in the business world, unemployment will be on the increase instead of the decline. Even the passage of the leave bills would warrant the employment of a few more people.

"N. R. B." (F).

High Cost of Living.

See the list of prices
Mounting to the sky,
You'll find there's little
That a clerk can buy.
I'd like to taste some turkey,
Or even a fat hen,
But I have counted up my change
And it's bread and beans again.

The Laboratory proves:

"Causes more heat to be given off by radiation than its own combustion produces, so that the net result is that the temperature of the body is lowered."

Tropical Evidence shows:

Statistics compiled from the consular records of Argentina, Ecuador, Colombia, Peru, Chile and Venezuela show that whiskey is a 3-to-1 favorite over any other type of distilled spirit sold below the Equator.

HERE'S AMAZING PROOF THAT CALVERT COOLS:

Camel's Hair Sports Model Combines Smartness and Long Wear.

By Dudley Harmon,
Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

TO JUDGE by fashion notes from Paris this fall, the smart woman is going to thumb her nose at the world, sartorially speaking. The mode is to be definitely youthful and gay, with a touch of rakishness. The nonchalance of the new styles is nowhere more in evidence than in the new coats now being featured in local department stores, the majority of which are made on swagger lines.

We spotted a particularly attractive one the other day in an F street store. It's a sports coat which should be ideal for football games, campus wear, and days in the country. It is equally modish when worn in town.

The material is a fine Brittany camel's hair. Downy and soft, it has sturdy qualities as well. You can use it again and again, winter after winter, and be sure it won't wear out.

Model Has Smartness.

But this coat is not simply one of those practical, wear-proof models that your mother used to make you buy when a child because they were so lasting, and which you simply hated because they had no chic whatever. You will find that this model is the last word in smartness.

The back is very trickily cut on the bias, which gives it the effect of hanging loose and free. This is particularly becoming to angular people, as it gives them fullness behind. The sleeves have cartridge pleats at the shoulder, which makes the coat fit snugly at the top. The sleeves themselves are sleek and tight, with only a slight flare at the elbow for elegance.

The collar shows the Italian Rennaissance influence which has taken the fashion world by storm. It stands stiffly up around the chin, giving one the look of one of the less sinister Medici. Buttoning up tightly around the neck, it is very snug.

By this time your summer stores of powder and cold cream must be nearly exhausted. Why not replenish your stores for the winter? A downtown store has recently stocked some grand cleansing cream and powder. The cream is a special nonliquefying product, guaranteed not to turn oily on your face. There's nothing quite so disagreeable in summer as the feeling that one's face is swimming about in a mass of grease, as is so often the case when one applies the average brand of cold cream. This brand, however, has a delightfully cooling and refreshing effect.

It does its work well, too, and is death on blackheads and other impurities. Also, this cream nourishes the tissue, filling out unbecoming hollows and giving the skin a firm, healthy tone.

The same house has just put out something new in powder, as well. It comes in a rose beige shade, which is ideal for that attractive pink glow. It is a very fine blend, so carefully mixed that the effect on the skin is very smooth and natural.

The cold cream costs from $1.50 to $3.00 a jar, depending on your choice of size. The powder may be purchased for $2.

Sale on Hairbrushes.

A DOWNTOWN STORE is having a sale of hairbrushes this week. These brushes are quite out of the ordinary, as they are the kind which usually sell for from $3.50 up. Now you can get them for $1.

Any beauty specialist will tell you that nothing helps the hair so much as regular brushing. In these days of permanents and finger waves, one is all too often inclined to nurture them along without a brush, hoping thus to keep the wave in better. However, a good brushing not only adds sheen and luster to the locks, but actually strengthens the wave, as well. And these brushes are the kind they sell at expensive beauty shops, for they are made of the finest bristles. They come in redwood, ebony or satinwood.

Now that NRA codes have been eliminated, child workers need greater legislative protection, believes Miss Beatrice McConnell, director of the industrial division of the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department.

Miss McConnell Finds That Factories Distributing Work to Tenement Families Are Difficult to Regulate; NRA Called Boon to Cause.

By Dudley Harmon.

MISS BEATRICE McCONNELL, newly appointed director of the industrial division of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, probably knows more about the conditions and problems of children who work than any other person in Washington.

From years of research and practical experience in industrial fields, Miss McConnell feels that the greatest obstacle in the path of better working conditions of children today is the practice of homework.

"Many employers," she said, "especially garment manufacturers, parcel out their work to tenement families, where, in turn, a great deal of it is passed on to the children. This kind of work is hardest of all for the Government to regulate. Although we send inspectors around regularly to look for sweatshop conditions in tenements, the greater division of responsibility incurred in home work makes it very difficult to control. The manager of a factory is directly responsible for any infractions which take place in his plant, but an employer who distributes his work here and there in private homes is less easy to apprehend."

NRA Helped Cause.

"The NRA was the greatest factor in recent years in improving the lot of the working child," continued Miss McConnell. "By making it illegal to employ children under 16 years of age, the codes eliminated an enormous proportion of young workers." "Look," she said, pointing to a chart in her hand, "for the first time in history an upward swing in industrial conditions has been accompanied by a downward swing in the number of children employed. Usually it is just the other way around, and an increase in industrial production results in a greater employment of young persons."

"Do you think that the end of the codes will mean a return to old conditions, as far as children are concerned?" she was asked.

"Although it is too early to tell as yet," she replied, "I have great hopes that the benefits of the NRA will not be destroyed. I think that in the last two years industry has successfully demonstrated that it can get along without child labor. However, we can by no means assume that children will not continue to be exploited in industry until Federal laws are passed regulating their employment.

Legislation Needed.

"I believe that complete abolition of child labor will be effected only by the passage of laws which regulate employers as a whole throughout the Nation. Regulation must be uniform. The child labor amendment, of course, has never been ratified. Until that or something like it is nationally adopted the best we can do is to try to get the States to pass their own laws of this kind."

Miss McConnell has been interested in economic conditions as applied to women and children since her student days at the University of Wisconsin. She majored in economics there, and received her master's degree at Simmons College in Boston. During her college career she spent a summer sampling factory work at first hand, as an employe in clothing, candy and hosiery factories.

Previous to her present appointment, Miss McConnell was director of the women's and children's bureau in the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. Here she conducted research into working conditions of Pennsylvania women and children, and her efforts were largely instrumental in bringing about last spring the passage by the State Legislature of a law fixing the minimum working age for children at 16 years.

Asked what she thought the minimum working age for children should be, Miss McConnell replied, "Of course, the longer a child can remain at school, the better, but I should say that if he is absolutely obliged to work, he can begin at 16 without mental or physical detriment to himself."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have enough intelligence to hold a splendid job. I am a good swimmer, rider, dancer, etc. I don't think I am hard to look at, and I believe I dress smartly. I try hard to be neat and take precautions against "B. O." and "halitosis."

But still I'm lonesome. I have no friends, no good times. In the company of others I am silent as a clam. I don't know what to say. When I do speak, it sounds silly. I have come to the conclusion that I lack personality and am uninteresting.

* * * *

It has always been that way. I was an only child and though I was not spoiled I was never at ease with other children. It was the same way at college. I graduated with honors but my classmates always seemed "wiser" than I. I never had dates and was never invited to parties and dances.

* * * *

This situation was relieved a little when a young man and I became close friends about four years ago and were together almost constantly. But he died not long ago. Now this loneliness is worse than ever. I am almost a nervous wreck. I must start going out or I can't stand it any longer.

Do you think, as I do, that my personality is at fault? Should I take a night course at some school of expression? Should I see a psychologist? If so, will you recommend a school or psychologist? Just what do you advise me to do to become popular with other people?

Sincerely yours, JEAN.

On Overcoming Shynesss.

DEAR JEAN: I suggest you go to one of the local libraries, or to the Congressional Library, and read an article entitled, "Victorians Had a Word for It," by Helen Van Pelt Wilson, which you will find in the January, 1935, issue of Scribners' magazine. The writer tells of a friend ". . . who emerged from college, brainy, awkward, homely and panicky in the presence of men. She literally achieved charm by intelligent study, in three years transforming herself into a woman of Italian distinction. Her ugliness had style. Women noticed her and men passed by more obviously pretty girls to converse with her. 'I knew what I wanted,' she explained, 'and I went after it. The result's coming this evening.' He was a handsome young surgeon, undoubtedly a fair reward!"

* * * *

"She started," we are told, with a thorough going over at a beauty salon. A good dancing teacher taught her grace and relaxation—how to sit, stand and shake hands, things all of us can learn from books and magazine articles if we are really serious about it. Her doctor prescribed diet and exercise to make her gain weight. She achieved style through study of fashion magazines. Her improved appearance naturally brought self-assurance and poise, and with her mind thus freed of her unattractiveness, she concerned herself with other ideas, gradually learning the tricks of revealing her charm."

* * * *

The writer, who defines charm as the ability to attract because we ourselves are attracted, believes the self-effacing girl never gets anywhere, while the one who may be homely but is not oppressed by the fact is taken by man at her own valuation. She believes a low, well-modulated voice attracts, as well as a knowledge of current events to give one something to say to people of all types; that every girl should play a fair game of tennis or golf, should be able to ride and swim——" * * * not brilliantly, but well enough so that fear will not be gnawing at her vitals * * * "—and that mastery of dancing is "especially vital."

But read the article for yourself. And then get buy.

* * * *

You tell me you are well educated, intelligent, hold a splendid job, can swim, ride, dance, etc.; are good looking, well dressed and personally fastidious. This being true, you can be popular if you will deliberately set yourself to make people like you. Remember that he who would have friends must show himself friendly, and that love (or liking) as a rule begets love.

* * * *

In almost everyone there is something to be interested in and to admire. Use your intelligence to discover those qualities in persons you meet. Nothing is simpler, and at the same time more conducive to kindling a warmth of feeling in another's breast than to display a genuine interest in those things which interest him.

* * * *

To be "silent as a clam" may be a social asset, if you can listen raptly while keeping silent. When you "don't know what to say," just ask questions. Not, of course, rude, pointed, probing questions of an intimate nature—but questions calculated to give your vis-a-vis opportunity to discuss subjects on which he is qualified to speak, be it gardening, music, surgery, sports, painting, politics, baby-tending, women's rights, or whatever.

* * * *

If you lack personality and are uninteresting, it must be because you are afraid to respond to others with any show of warmth. Personality is a compound of physical vitality and spontaneous interest in others.

It seems to me that, in view of the equipment you already possess, you should be able to win through to social success without consulting a psychologist, providing you will substitute courage for cowardice; unremitting effort for apathetic sideline sitting, and attentive interest in others for critical self-appraisal.

* * * *

However, you might profit immensely by talking with Miss Beulah Smith, director of the Washington Life Adjustment Center, Adams 7979. If, in her opinion, you need scientific guidance, she will refer you to the proper source. Miss Smith is now on vacation, but will be in her office after Labor Day.

* * * *

A course in a school of expression might be of benefit, if only through bringing you into contact with other persons at this time when you are virtually sick from loneliness. I suggest you telephone Miss Florence McCracken, 1323 Kalmia road northwest, Georgia 1285, and ask for a consultation. Miss McCracken knows a great deal about studies offered in schools of expression and the possible benefit to be derived from the different classes. I have called her concerning your problem, and she has said she will be glad to talk with you.

American Men Lax in Dress, Stylist Asserts

AMERICAN MEN are "nice," but they don't know how to dress, says Miss Ethyle D. Campbell, London stylist, who recently arrived in New York to survey American fashions.

"American men never match their clothes," she declared. They never think of matching their ties with their socks as Englishmen do. They wear sports shoes with business suits. No matter how hot it is, an Englishman wears the proper clothes for the city.

"You think of an Englishman in the evening with his boiled shirt and perfectly tailored black suit. But an American would probably tie a piece of string around his waist rather than go to the trouble of putting on braces."

Taking a ship news reporter as a horrible example, Miss Campbell pointed out that he was wearing gray trousers, a brown coat, a black hat and black shoes with white tops and "trying to look unconcerned."

Miss Campbell said Paris was no longer the world's style center, but that American women led in daytime clothes, especially sports costumes. London, she said, still "held its own" in evening frocks.

SHERBET MENU for TODAY

Simplest Frozen Dessert Is Made Nourishing by Adding Milk.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SHERBETS are the simplest of frozen desserts and they are the easiest to make. Many persons do not care for a frozen dessert that is merely sugar, fruit juice and water. The texture though smooth is lacking in body. Beaten egg whites are often added to give more body and a still smoother texture to a water ice, as it is often called. Few women, however, realize that milk can be added to a lemon or orange sherbet to form a delicious smooth frozen dessert that has more flavor and more character than one made simply with water and fruit juice sweetened with sugar.

This dessert has all the qualities of an ice cream, but it is not as rich and is therefore more desirable for children. It is inexpensive to make, too.

Milk sherbet can be frozen in the trays of an automatic refrigerator as well as in a crank freezer. Set the freezing control to the highest point to insure fast freezing and stir the mixture two or three times during the first hour or two of freezing.

The lemon-orange milk sherbet suggested for today's dinner dessert is made by the following method:

Milk Sherbet.

Few grains salt
Juice of two oranges and two lemons
1½ cups sugar

BREAKFAST.

* * * *

Poached eggs on Holland rusks
Broiled sausage links

Iced tea Milk (for children)

DINNER.

"Rag Rug Wool' Hats Popular for Sports

Paris Showings Feature Rayon Velvets for Fall

Paris—Dull rayon velvets with short pile are being emphasized in the Worth fall and winter showings. Velvets of slit cellulose film, which in the United States is made of cellophane, are introduced in many models and changeable velvets are in the front ranks of style. Velvet dots appear on a number of tulles.

Gold Flecks Shimmer.

Paris, Aug. 5 (AP).—Gold-flecked prystal makes some new Parisian tricks to wear with summer sports clothes. The prystal, resembling crystal, makes rings and big bracelets of chiseled modern design.

Berets Go Tricorne.

London, Aug. 5 (AP).—The tricorne shape has been adopted for the autumn beret. It is poised at the true beret angle—slightly to one side of the head, and showing the forehead.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

By Pattie Ellicott.

WHEN A STATELY English butler announced, "luncheon is served" at Miramar, the palatial Palm Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia; at White Marsh Hall, the Stotesburys Chestnut Hill home or at their Bar Harbor villa there is good reason to believe that corned beef hash will be on the menu.

Mrs. Stotesbury, who is the mother-in-law of Mrs. James R. Cromwell, formerly Doris Duke, the "richest girl in the world," often has entertained this maiden of millions at luncheons where Doris has found the corned beef hash very much to her liking.

Mr. Stotesbury, one of the Morgan partners and now in his eighties, is a devotee of this plain American dish which appears on his table, side by side with delicacies.

Mrs. Stotesbury, well known in Washington, where, as Mrs. Oliver Cromwell, she lived for several years, prior to her marriage to the Philadelphia banker, probably picked up her liking for this homely but appetizing dish in the Capital. Official society cultivated a taste for it first when the late Mark Hanna served it at his famous breakfasts in the old Arlington Hotel, where politics, corned beef hash and (shades of New England ancestors) pie were the order of the morning.

Another senatorial devotee of corned beef hash was the erudite Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts. A smile always could be won from Lodge when corned beef hash was served for any meal. Sometimes, no doubt, the Stotesbury head chef prepares the corned beef hash from "The Palmer House Cook Book," by Ernest E. Amiet, a favorite in many American homes of distinction. Here is the recipe:

Corned Beef Hash Steamed.

Chop or grind two pounds of boiled corn beef and ten ounces of cooked, cold potatoes. Place a saucepan, add a little ground nutmeg, one tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of white pepper and a pint of soup stock, or water, if the former is not available.

Stir continuously as ingredients come to a boil. Place a cover over saucepan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Dress nicely on a serving dish and serve with tomato sauce.

Oxygen's Use Held No Cure For Cyanosis

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

EVER since the discovery of oxygen by Joseph Priestley and the recognition of its importance by the French chemist, Lovoisier, its essential role in the operation of the human body has been studied.

The principal symptom that calls for oxygen is known as cyanosis. This means that the blood is receiving too little oxygen, and the face (particularly the lips), the tip of the nose, and the extremities (hands and feet) will appear dusky or bluish in shade.

There are some perfectly obvious causes of cyanosis: (1) any obstruction to the flow of air to and from the lungs; (2) reduction in the lung area; (3) failure on the part of the heart to pump the normal amount of blood.

While the lung capacity, heart power, etc., may be sufficient to provide the blood with oxygen for ordinary use, whenever there is an increased demand for oxygen on the part of the tissues there may be an inadequate supply and hence cyanosis.

A number of diseases are accompanied by insufficient oxygen in the blood. In pneumonia, for example, the air sacs and even the bronchi may be filled with fluid and cells, shutting off the entrance of air. This results in a reduction in the area of the functioning lung.

We are quite familiar with the cyanosis of the face that develops after a severe coughing spell. This is particularly noticeable in children following the intense paroxysms that attend whooping cough.

Heart disease may cause cyanosis because of the failure of this organ to pump sufficient blood through the lungs.

When cyanosis occurs we have positive evidence of interference with the nutrition of the tissues, and if it continues for any length of time damage to muscles and organs will result. The body was planned to function on a certain consumption of oxygen and whenever this is reduced, the tissues will be correspondingly starved. For this reason when cyanosis develops the use of an oxygen room may be invaluable. The gas may also be administered through a tube placed in the nose or by means of an oxygen tent. These devices are now in everyday use in modern hospitals.

A pneumonia patient may be struggling for air with a third of the lungs shut off because of disease. Breathing is greatly accelerated—40 times or more per minute—but even this added physical effort is not sufficient to supply needed oxygen and the face may be cyanotic. Let this patient enter an oxygen room where the concentration is 50 per cent or higher and the effect is often spectacular. Respiration slows, extra heart effort ceases and the normal color returns to the skin.

Girl Poet Seeks Information On Boy Who Inspired Verse

WHAT HAS BECOME of Roger Jackson, "The Janitor's Boy?"

The publication of the ninth edition of Nathalia Crane's first book of verse, "The Janitor's Boy," has aroused this wonder again in the minds of Nathalia and her friends.

The book came off the presses just a few days before Nathalia celebrated her twenty-second birthday. She has just completed a four-year course at Barnard College and is ready to resume her writing.

Nathalia at the age of 9 gained fame by her love poem to the "red-reaided janitor's boy." The boy, Roger Jackson, lived with his parents in a Brooklyn apartment building with the Cranes. He was Nathalia's playmate and she addressed him in her poem as follows:

"Your hair was red, your eyes were brown,
You had a freckled nose;
You were the father of my dolls,
My husband, I suppose.

Oh, Roger! You were only nine,
And I was half-past eight;
It really was romantic, or
As good, at any rate."

Nathalia lost contact with Roger after the Cranes moved from the apartment building, but she saw him again in 1927 and they had a talk about their childhood. He told her at that time he intended to go to college. She has not heard from him since. Asked concerning him recently, she said:

"I'd love to hear from him. I'd like to know what has become of him. I hope he's happy and a success."

Nathalia, a tall, slender young woman, now expects to publish her sixth book of verse, "The Garden of Lindaraja," in the fall. She has also written a play based on the eviction of the bonus marchers from Washington. She has several lectures scheduled for fall.

Front Royal Guard Camp Is Canceled

Gen. Warren Accedes to Request by Warren Health Board.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 14.—The 111th Field Artillery and Headquarters Battery of Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade will not train at Front Royal for their annual maneuvers, as announced last night in Richmond by Adjt. Gen. S. Gardner Waller, of the Virginia National Guard.

The Warren County board of health, meeting here today, voted unanimously to request Gen. Waller not to bring the units to Front Royal and he acceded to the request. The action followed widespread local protest against the encampment at Front Royal after announcement had been made the troops would arrive here Sunday.

Plans for training the two Artillery units at Fort Royal, while the Infantry and other special units were assigned to the coast, were made when Pennsylvania and Maryland successively refused to grant Virginia troops permission to train in their territory because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in Virginia.

Yesterday Dr. I. C. Riggin, Virginia health commissioner, communicated by telephone with Dr. L. F. Hansbrough, local health officer, expressing the opinion that "any increased risk of the transmission of infantile paralysis by the encampment of the National Guard troop would be negligible," and Dr. Hansbrough granted Gen. Waller's request that the encampment be permitted, with restrictions that the troops be confined to the encampment grounds except for necessary official visits to Front Royal. The ground selected for the encampment is in Front Royal, one mile distant from the business center.

No cases of infantile paralysis have appeared in Warren County. Theater and church attendance has been limited to adults for several weeks and the town authorities have requested omission of all other general meetings of the public.

It is understood the Virginia National Guard may train some of its units in Powells Fort Valley in Shenandoah County.

Riggin Sees Gain

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 14.—The infantile paralysis situation in Virginia is "encouraging," Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner, declared today as reports of ten new cases were received.

Pointing out that reports for Monday and Tuesday were fewer than on the same days last week and today's total was one less than last Wednesday's, the commissioner repeated a previous assertion that "there is an apparent decrease in the prevalence of the disease in Virginia."

Of the cases registered today two were from Roanoke, two from Albemarle County, one each from Alleghany, Nelson, Tazewell, Isle of Wight and Rockbridge Counties and one from Richmond City.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 14.—Three weeks have elapsed without any further cases of infantile paralysis being reported in Danville. City health nurses who are in touch with those who have been infected report that all of the victims are showing improvement, many of them having regained the use of their affected limbs.

Brannock, pastor of Gregory Memorial Church, Govanstown, Md., conducted the service.

The widow and two children survive. He was a brother of Mrs. John Armstrong and Mrs. Archibald Lennox, Zihlman, and Alex Rankin, Barrellville, Md.

Lightning Strikes Tree And Kills Fish in Pond

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bedford, Pa., Aug. 14.—When lightning struck a tree on one of the banks of a trout-retaining pond at the Reynolds Dale (Bedford County) Fish Hatchery, the shock killed 45 brook trout averaging 10 inches in length. This is one of the rarest occurrences on record, for seldom do electric storms cause havoc with fish life.

The toll in the big pond taken by the lightning was not heavy, for 7,000 trout of similar size were swimming in it when the bolt struck.

Girl Free in Bond In Death of Child

Mother to Face Grand Jury Action on Drowning.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., Aug. 14.—Pauline Carter, young unmarried mother, was at liberty under $1,000 bond today to await action by an Augusta County grand jury in September on the charge that she drowned her 13-day-old baby in the South River at Waynesboro, her home.

The 21-year-old silk mill worker was released from jail here, where she had been confined about two weeks, in custody of Mrs. O. W. Robertson, probation officer. Bond was posted by Robert Carter, the young woman's father. Miss Carter waived a preliminary hearing before trial Justice W. T. Sheehan.

The same grand jury will hear the case of Rex Haines, Grayson County youth accused of seducing the young woman while he was a member of a CCC camp at Sherando. He left the camp in December.

Miss Carter and her mother said Haines promised to marry Pauline, and arrangements for a marriage were made twice, once here and once at Pulaski, but Haines did not appear.

The young mother told officers she placed her infant in the fork of a tree near the river, but had no intent to kill the child.

Apple Output Predictions Called High

August Estimates of Virginia Increase Questioned.

Normal Crop Foreseen This Year in Eastern Panhandle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 14. Apple men in this belt are puzzled by the four-State section of the August apple crop estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, issued August 10 as of August 1. It was the first offered nation-wide estimate of the apple crop.

The August estimate predicts a national commercial crop of 32,964,000 barrels, against last year's 24,500,000, an increase of 35 per cent.

The puzzling part of the crop estimate is the big increase predicted for West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania. Growers here, fairly familiar through the years with the four-State belt, are much surprised to note the department's prediction of 6 1-3 million barrels, against 4 1-3 million barrels last year, a 30 per cent jump. All four States are credited with large jumps over last year.

West Virginia's commercial apple crop is estimated at 1,320,000 barrels against 825,000 barrels last year, an increase of 60 per cent.

Local growers and specialists are about unanimous in the opinion that the crop this year averages no heavier than last year in the Eastern Panhandle, principal apple section of the State, and that cedar rust and scab will take a larger toll of commercial fruit than did the total of disease and pests last year, so that the commercial crop probably will in reality be slightly under last year's.

Virginia is credited with an almost 50 per cent increase over last year, with 3,173,000 barrels against 2,187,000 barrels in 1934. Virginia has the largest set, but a heavy toll is being taken by rust and scab in the larger producing counties.

Maryland's estimated crop is practically doubled—400,000 barrels against 205,000 last year. Growers of nearby Maryland, principal producing section of Mayland's late crop, generally report few more than last year in prospect.

Pennsylvania is credited with a big increase also, of a million bushels, 1,472,000 barrels against last year's 1,130,000 barrels.

"Quince rust," a close relative to cedar rust, is beginning to show itself in apple orchards over this section, according to F. J. Schneiderhan, superintendent of the University Experiment Station at Kearneysville.

The quince rust's host plant is the red cedar, as is the cedar's rust, but the quince rust attacks and lives on the trunks of cedar trees only, whereas the cedar rust develops by red bolls coming upon the limb tips of the cedars in spring rains. The quince rust, further, comes annually, while the red cedar bolls are erratic in their appearance.

Quince rust attacks apples much as cedar rust does, stunting their growth and twisting and shriveling them. It has been known here for some years, but has never become sufficiently widespread to cause much damage heretofore, or to be considered a major pest. This year it has done considerable damage locally. A part of the damage attributed to cedar rust is doubtless due to the cedar rust, although cedar rust has been exceedingly active also this season, notes Dr. Schneiderhan.

Quince rust attacks several of the section's principal apple varieties that are partially resistant to cedar rust, Stayman winesap and Delicious both being susceptible to it. York Imperial is particularly susceptible to cedar rust.

Schneiderhan will cruise the Eastern Panhandle orchard section to study the cedar and quince rust damage.

New Virginia Judge Faces Salary Delay

The Attorney General's office disclosed yesterday that if the new judge for the recently created position on the bench of the Eastern District Court is not appointed by President Roosevelt until after Congress adjourns, no salary will be available for him, lacking Senate confirmation, until Congress meets again, according to the Associated Press.

Assistants to the Attorney General said that in that event reappointment and subsequent confirmation would be necessary. If the same man were reappointed back salary automatically would be available.

Scout Executive Voices Hope for More Camps

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 14.—The hope that every section of the Shenandoah area in which there are Boy Scout troops eventually will be served by a permanent camp site owned by Scout units was expressed today by Frank Horton, Scout executive for the area.

Martinsburg and Berkeley County, W. Va., have already acquired such a site at a cost of $1,000, Horton said. Charles Town Scout units likewise have their own camp site. Winchester Boy Scouts, who this week are on their annual encampment on the Capon River in West Virginia, do not own a camp site of their own.

Bus Service To Supersede B.&A. Asked

Red Star Line Submits Bid at Hearing in Baltimore.

B. & O. Railroad Co. Revealed as Backer of New Line.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 14.—Offers to establish bus routes in the area now served by the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad were made to the Public Service Commission today at a hearing which disclosed that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is financing the new Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad Co.

The Red Star Bus Lines offered to establish lines over four different routes between Baltimore and Annapolis. All the routes go to Glen Burnie. From there one goes to Annapolis via Round Bay and Severna Park; one goes via the Crain and Generals highway; one goes by Fort George G. Meade, Millersville, Odenton and Gambrills, and the fourth goes via Severn Crossroads.

Cash fares on the bus lines would be about the same as on the old W., B. & A., which will cease operation on August 20. But Lee Webster Selfe, of the bus line, said that his commutation rates would be about twice as high as they were on the railroad.

Setup Disclosed.

The disclosure of the financing arrangements for the new B. & A. Co. were made by George M. Shriver, senior vice president of the B. & O. The B. & A. was formed by the bondholders of the old Short Line to take over this section of the W., B. & A. and operate it.

Shriver said the Baltimore & Ohio had agreed to lend the new company $250,000 for the acquisition and improvement of their roadway. Of this amount $100,000 will be spent for a connection between the tracks of the Annapolis line and the Baltimore & Ohio tracks. The electric trains will operate into the Baltimore & Ohio Camden Station.

Full-Day Session.

The commission spent almost the entire day in holding hearings on the application of the B. & A., the Red Star Bus Lines and the Peninsula Transit Corporation, another bus line which asked permission to carry local passengers between Annapolis and Washington.

At the conclusion of the long session, the commissioners announced that the applications would be taken under advisement, and that decisions would be made shortly. In view of the short time before operation of the W., B. & A. will cease, attaches of the commission said that the decision would probably be reached before the end of this week.

23 Speeders Arrested.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Mackall Prefers President's Word to That of Ickes

Former YPA Administrator From Maryland Answers Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 14.—Defending himself against the latest onslaught by Public Works Administrator Ickes, John N. Mackall, former works progress administrator for Maryland, today said that he had a choice between believing Ickes and believing President Roosevelt, and he preferred to believe the President.

Ickes had accused Mackall of making statements "without authority and unqualifiedly false." Mackall in return said his statements were based on a written agreement between the President, Ickes, Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins, and the Maryland Senators.

The current round in the fight between Mackall and Ickes arose from a letter written to Ickes by Lloyd C. Culler, Mayor of Frederick, Md. Culler wrote Ickes that Mackall had advised him to withdraw the town's PWA application for $452,000 for a new sewer system and apply anew for money from WPA funds.

Mackall said that under the terms of the agreement which he had seen, all Federal funds for Maryland counties had been allocated to WPA. This agreement, he asserted, left nothing to be spent for PWA projects. He averred that he had not advised Culler to withdraw the application, but had told him that if he did not get the money from PWA he probably would not get it at all.

Mackall again asserted that the differences of opinion between Ickes and himself was unimportant compared to the problems of unemployment.

Ballots Are Burned Before Va. Check

Courtland, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—Some of the ballots cast by Southampton County voters in the primary August 6 were burned "accidentally" by a Negro janitor before they could be rechecked, officials said today, adding that they did not anticipate any contests on this basis.

Prosecutor Junius W. Pulley said he had been advised by the attorney general that if a demand for a recount should be made, the election judges should be called to justify the totals on their tally sheets. The prosecutor pointed out that the successful candidates won by two to one margins.

U. of V. Revises Requirements For Diplomas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., Aug. 14.—New requirements for bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees at the University of Virginia were explained in a statement released today by Dr. George O. Ferguson, jr., dean of the college departemnt.

Designed to promote "a reasonably thorough mastery of at least one important field of knowledge," the revised requirements were drawn up by a facultly committee after a year of study. They were adopted in June to become effective at the beginning of the 1936-37 session.

Several distinctive departures from the former system, which has been in effect since 1922, have been incorporated in the new set-up. Courses of study, covering a year's work, are to be defined as units, rather than in terms of session or term hours.

Five Courses Per Year.

Twenty courses are required for either of the two degrees, and a student is normally expected to complete five each year. Science courses carrying both classroom and laboratory work are counted as double courses.

Of the eight courses necessary for either degree, one must be in English, two in each of two different foreign languages, one in mathematics, and a double course in a science.

A candidate for the degree of bachelor of arts must complete two years in Greek or Latin, and a candidate for a bachelor of science degree two courses in French or German.

Exemptions Provided.

The new regulations call for the completion of six of the eight required courses two years before graduation, and all must be completed at least one year before graduation. Students may be exempt from required work, except in science, by passing an examination at the beginning of the session, and those who present credit on admission for the equivalent of a first-year language course may begin advanced work.

Two years before graduation a student must select as his field of concentration a major subject taught in one of the academic departments. The program of study for the third year must include not less than three courses in the major field and not less than two courses in related subjects.

The remaining courses of the 20 necessary for graduation may be elective. Shortly before graduation a candidate must make a satisfactory standing in a final comprehensive examination on his field of concentration.

Norfolk to Get State Firemen's 1936 Conclave

Virginia Association Puts All Present Officers Back in Posts.

By the Associated Press.

Clifton Forge, Va., Aug. 14.—By a unanimous vote the Virginia State Firemen's Association this afternoon accepted an invitation to hold their fifteenth annual convention at Norfolk in 1936.

The firemen also took unprecedented action in re-electing by acclamation all present officers of the association. They are Frank H. Wheeler, of Clifton Forge, president; C. H. Page, of Charlottesville, vice president; A. R. Thompson, of Hampton, treasurer; O. W. Dabney, of Staunton, secretary, and J. C. Garber, of Staunton, chaplain.

At the close of the business session this afternoon President Wheeler appointed a committee to investigate what was termed the unauthorized cancellation of the Ladies' Auxiliary meeting this morning. Reports were heard that the women's meeting was canceled by some person not connected with the organization.

The principal address to the approximately 700 delegates and officers today was made by former State Senator John J. Wicker. He urged his audience to rally public sentiment in America for a "happy medium" between "two dangerous extremes," one holding that the rich man should "share nothing with his brother," and the other that the poor man should be supported by others.

Morton Wallerstein, secretary of the Virginia League of Municipalities, in explaining the foremen's relief bill, urged its passage by all cities and towns in Virginia and suggested that its constitutionality be tested.

A resolution passed designating the first Sunday after the annual convention "firemen's memorial day" to be observed throughout Virginia.

Bankers Ask Receivership For Distillery

Bank Official Accused of Illegally Supplying Factory Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 14.—A hearing will be held in circuit court here Monday on a petition of the National Central Bank, Baltimore, for an order of receivership for the Harford Pure Rye Distilleries, at Havre de Grace.

The bank's petition was filed with the court today, alleging that money withdrawn "unauthorizedly" from the bank was used in erecting the distillery. It contended the distillery company was insolvent and asked the receivership to protect the bank's claims against the concern.

Conspiracy Charges Pending.

In the meantime, Federal charges of conspiracy to embezzle $226,000 from the bank were pending in Baltimore against Fenby T. Brown, president of the distillery; Harry H. Hahn, former vice president and cashier of the bank, and two of the bank's employes.

The funds were drawn from the bank, the bill of complaint alleged, "by checks against deposits in the bank and which were in excess of their deposits in said bank and which were concealed from the bank's knowledge by its former cashier, who was one of the promoters of said distillery."

Operated Less Than Two Weeks.

The distillery, erection of which was begun approximately a year and a half ago, had been in operation only a little more than a week. It is housed in a remodeled and enlarged cotton mill plant buiilding.

A copy of the articles of incorporation was filed here. It listed the authorized capital stock at $500,000, divided into 500,000 shares of $1 par value each.

Representing the bank in the receivership action are Frank Hays Jacobs and Broadnax Cameron, of Bel Air and the Baltimore law firm of Venable, Baetjer & Howard.

Aces of Screen Events Taut on Fighting Moves

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

With this Italo-Ethiopian imbroglio threatening to blow the top off the world again, the newsreelmen are beginning once more to tear at each other's throats.

There is, of course, a mad scramble to be on the spot with the trusty old lens trained where it will do the most good when the Lion of Judah and Il Duce begin picking them up off the floor and heaving them at each other like a Primo Carnera and a Joe Louis, not necessarily in the order named. Some of the boys are already out there doing their stuff for the edification of the screen-gazers.

This is brought to my attention by a wire from Charlie Brennan, manager of the Warner Bros. Metropolitan Theater and a neatly typed news story from the inner sanctum of Prof. Frank La Falce, the agile wordist, who doles out important items for the press on behalf of the Warners' Washington manager, Mr. John J. Payette.

First Flashes From Front.

John Dored is the lad who is on the spot, but not in the casual gangster sense, in Addis Ababa. He has long been Paramount's ace "trouble shooter" and, in his day, man and boy, has caught such minor incidents as the fighting with the Riffs in Africa, the Spanish revolution, mob disorders in France, Germany and Austria, and the Greek revolution.

But if it is the film at the Metropolitan you are interested in, you should know that it presents views of the Ethiopian Parliament at Addis Ababa, a review of seven armies, with tribal chieftains pledging their loyalty to their ruler and the League of Nations session at which an Ethiopian emissary expressed the appreciation of his country for the attitude taken by the other nations of the earth with regard to the explosive situation existing in a little-known corner of the African continent.

Holmes Was First.

One who remembers Burton Holmes' vivid pictorial record of the coronation of Emperor Haile Selassie and the grim mien of many of his chieftains can not take very lightly the implication that if worst comes to worst, the Ethiopians will manage to give a fair account of themselves as disrupters of the Italian notion that they may be merely a bunch of "setups."

Giants who kill lions with their hands had better be fought with gas from the air than with any idea of coming out on top in a contest of brawn, personally applied at point of origin! And this, understand me, is the pronouncement of one who is strictly neutral!

It is Mr. M. B. Lundgren, of 1026 Fifteenth street, who takes the trouble to write in concerning a recent sentence in this column which purported to say, "Taking for granted the proficiency and minutely conscientious effort that Phil Spitalny always brings to the task at hand, he would not get more than half as far as he does in the direction of a genuine ovation were it not for the skill of Evelyn Kaye, etc."

By one of those deft touches of the gentlemanly compositor that sometimes upset the best-intentioned compliments, the word "skill" came out in the paper as that abomination to the nostrils which hogs inexplicably contrive to become favorably excited over at mealtime.

We trust Miss Kaye will understand the innocence of a "typo" that seemed to cast aspersions upon her artistry as a musician and arranger when what was intended was quite the opposite.

And we hope Mr. Lundgren, also, will understand that the kind things he says about this stick or two of type and the manner of its production is appreciated and valued very deeply, indeed.

Cochran Confessions.

Mr. Stephen E. Cochran's—and please note that I did not call him Panjandrum—yesterday's announcement concerning the contemplated tour of Miss Ethel Barrymore under his management, in W. Maugham's "The Constant Wife," omitted, and not quite unintentionally, the statement that Miss Barrymore has scored the same sort of hit in this play's revival that she did during the week that marked the beginning of her "comeback" as a guest star of the National Theater Players last spring.

All of Miss Barrymore's appearances in this play were marked by box-office sell-outs, wherever they may have been, but perhaps the most notable triumph was registered at Saybrook, Conn., when hundreds, unable to gain admittance to the theater, parked outside and stood in solid phalanxes just to be within earshot of the Barrymore voice.

And this is Ethel, not John, we are talking about. But they both have profiles—or had you noticed?

Speaking of Miss Barrymore, as somebody certainly was, her leading man is practically sure to be Walter Gilbert, who appeared with her in the revival of the Maugham play and was with her, also, in "Scarlet Sister Mary."

It is probable, too, that Adelaide Hibbard, a favorite of the National Theater Players' seasons will be cast as the mother, the role in which she scored so pronounced a success in last spring's revival of the play at the National.

Other additions to the cast will be made known by Mr. Cochran in due course.

And in addition to those to whom she was supposed to have open sesame—whatever that is — Edwina Wise, announced in yesterday's print as "Edwina Vise," is to see Sam H. Harris, Lee Shubert, Gilbert Miller, Harry Moses and Barney Klawans, all members of this club. The gal ought to get along all right!

John Is Hero.

On this page of today's issue of The Post you will observe—I hope—a pretty nice camera study of Gladys Swarthout, who is soon to be seen on the silver sheet in the role that Frances Starr, in private life Mrs. R. Golden Donaldson, of Washington, created in the stage version of "The Rose of the Rancho."

Yesterday, my good friend, John Boles, the tall, dark motion picture actor and singer who made his screen debut straight from the studios of Jean de Reske in Cannes, France, as leading man for Gloria Swanson in "The Loves of Sonya," the inaugural screen feature at the then-new Roxy Theater, in New York, registered as a star both in and out of focus.

John and Gladys Swarthout were lunching together at Malibu Beach when their table suddenly tipped over. Boles stopped an avalanche of dishes and a pot of hot coffee, that was not so cold, with his bare arm.

He was treated later at Malibu Hospital.

That is the way John is!

Sam Stratton comes in as avant courier—and that is going pretty ne plus ultra for any guy missionarying a show under canvas—for the Wallace-Hagenbeck-Sells Floto Brothers Circus and lends a breath of the so-called "legitimate" to the celebration of an "outlaw." He has a good show to boost, as even his rivals of the Ringling Brothers - Barnum and Bailey outfit had to concede. So what? So the playing dates are—look at the ads in The Post!

Thoroughly Fed-Up Note.

So to all of this, I say what Mark Twain said in his classic "1621," only I, being more delicate than he was, may say it only by implication.

"Said the queen."

Beauty Solves Problem of Heat Wave!

So captivated has she become by the vaunted California climate that Gladys Swarthout, former star of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company and soon to be seen on the screen in Paramount's picturization of "The Rose of the Rancho," has adopted the out-of-doors as her element. For purposes of both sun and pool bathing, Miss Swarthout dons this trig swim suit of white, with which, on occasion, she is said to wear a wicker coolie hat—whatever that is. This picture was snapped, incidentally, on the star's estate in Beverly Hills, one of the swankier Los Angeles suburbs.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Tintypes

Hollywood, Aug. 14.

HENRY FONDA really got started on a Broadway stage career in "The Farmer Takes a Wife." It is this same play that has started his movie career.

He was strictly a stock company actor, with ambitions, until this play. He was playing in "The Swan," at the Mount Kisco Summer Theater. June Walker, already signed to play in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," visited this theater, for her husband, Geoffrey Kerr, was playing the lead in "The Swan." Miss Walker liked Fonda. She mentioned him to Marc Connolly, who gave him the job.

His previous Broadway stage experience consisted of a walk-on in a Theater Guild production, one line to utter in "Forsaking All Others" and a featured role in that revue, "New Faces."

• • • •

HE was born in Grand Island, Nebr., on May 16, 1905. He was a normal child, wanting to be a cop, a cowboy and a street car conductor. His first real desire was to be a writer.

He still wants to be an author. His wardrobe trunk doesn't contain clothing, but the first acts of plays he started and never completed. He also has the beginning of a novel there. He does sculpturing and painting as a hobby, and is pretty good, too.

He insists that he was thrust upon the stage. It was in Omaha, after he had gotten out of the University of Minnesota.

The casting director for the community playhouse had to get a cast. He knew Fonda and persuaded him to try it. He did. He painted scenery and acted in Philip Barry's play, "You and I." After several performances he got to like it.

He is 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 170 pounds, has blue eyes, dark brown hair, a dimple in his right cheek, and a patch of hair on the lower portion of his back.

He doesn't appear as tall as he really is, for he generally slouches. He prefers comfortable clothes to fashionable clothes. Up until two weeks ago he didn't have a complete suit; that is, none of his trousers matched his jackets. He had to purchase two suits for his role in "Love Song," now in production.

• • • •

HE has yet to start making the Hollywood rounds and to be seen dancing and dining in those spots where the celebrities go to be seen. He didn't do it when he first arrived here. After his flicker was released he was afraid to do it. It would seem as if he was stepping out to take bows. While in one of the numerous stock companies he played the lead in "Merton of the Movies." When he arrived in the cinema city, he says, he felt like Merton—only no one stopped him at the gate.

He takes a cold shower every morning, and still hates to turn the cold water on. He shaves himself with a straight-edged blade. He prefers to be called Hank.

It was while at the Cape Playhouse in Dennis, Mass., that he met Margaret Sullavan. The troupe there built the theater and when the opening night of the play arrived they discovered that they had been more interested in the theater than the play. They had failed to provide all the necessary props. The play went on the opening night with many missing.

During one scene Miss Sullavan had to say to him: "I guess I'll get you a grass mat." She turned about to get it. It was one of the props missing. She turned about quickly and said to him: "No, I don't guess I will."

• • • •

FONDA and Sullavan are now divorced. They are friends.

He says he hasn't seen her while in Hollywood, but speaks to her occasionally over the phone.

He smokes cigarettes, but quit smoking several weeks ago. He lost 15 pounds while making "'Way Down East," and in an effort to regain the weight he quit smoking. He put back the pounds.

He is a big eater and will eat anything that is set before him. Anything but an apple. Apples make him ill. His favorite drink is beer. He will drink almost a case of beer in two days. This probably had much to do with putting on the weight.

He reads as many of the current novels as he can. His favorite author, at present, is John O'Hara. He plays a good game of poker, likes to dance, and with a good-looking gal. But who doesn't?

The chief difference between the stage and the screen, he finds, is that on the stage the character comes first and the lines second. For the screen the lines are most important. You must know every line perfectly for the brief recording and trust that a characterization will come through.

He sleeps in a large bed. He has no difficulty falling asleep, except when he is learning a new role. Then, he insists, he plays the part all night. He sleeps in the nude always.

He sings just enough to please himself. Yet in "Love Song," he has to sing "Celeste Aida." He believes he'll be able to do it, for the script reads: "Here he sings 'Celeste Aida' with more vim than accuracy."

Tigers Bombard Three Nat Pitchers to Coast to 18-2 Victory

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, Aug. 14.

CONFESSIONS of a baseball writer, or, if the truth be known, a typical day on the road:

Awakes with a start. Double-header starting at 1:30 today and it may be 4 p. m., who knows? Where's 'at damn watch? Reaches for watch and knocks watch, phone and four pounds of afternoon editions off the night table. Looks at the debris on the floor vacantly. Sees watch face-side up and tries to read time from sitting position in bed. Can't decide whether it says 5 o'clock or 20 after 12. Arrives at no decision and falls back on pillow. Awakes with another start, wonders how long he's slept and decides to rescue watch. Gauges distance and figures correctly he can reach it without getting out of bed. Arranges watch in reading position, figures out that it is half-past 12, and wonders what kind of a day it is.

POVICH.

Maybe the weather ain't so good and he can go to the races if they call off the ball games. Secretly hopes that weather ain't so good, and then suffers a pang of disappointment when he finds sun streaming into his eyes. Discovers it ain't the sun, but the bed lamp he's left on all night and hopes all over again that the weather ain't so good. Sticks his head out of window, figures that it looks like rain, and wonders what's in the entries. Suddenly remembers there's a big advance sale and that they won't call off the double-header unless it's raining liquid fire at game time. Decides the races are out and begins to take stock of himself.

Decides he feels pretty good, at least not bad, and congratulates himself. Turns on shower, escapes with slight scalding and then: to shave or not to shave? Decides to shave and discovers he has left shaving soap on train. Recalls those depression days on Fifty-ninth street, when, for a very good reason, there was no shaving soap in the house for a month, and smiles. Grabs bar of ordinary soap, wets it, dumps heap of ordinary talcum powder on soap, works it into paste with his fingers, daubs brush into it, applies it to his face, and, presto! Always did say it gave a better lather than the stuff you bought in the stores.

STEPS into elevator and decides to breakfast on those swell cakes and sausage they always serve in Cleveland. Enters dining room and discovers this is not Cleveland, but Detroit. Sees nobody he knows except Heinie Manush; recalls dirty piece he wrote about Heinie Manush the other day and decides to eat alone. Notes where morning paper says Nats were lucky to beat Tigers yesterday and decides Detroit newspapers are second only to Boston as home-town bugles. Collects his typewriter, buys afternoon editions and grabs cab to the ball park. Makes mental bet with himself that the old sour-puss on the press gate won't remember him as the same guy who has been going through the same press gate for the past nine years and will ask to be shown his baseball writers' pass. Wins bet, shows pass, and makes way to Washington dressing room.

Remembers with great satisfaction that there is an elevator to the press box and wonders if old Butch Klutz, who was Abner Doubleday's third-base coach, is still running it. Butch is. Wonders if Butch still resents cracks about the speed of his rheumatic lift and decides to find out. Ventures the question: "Is this thing gonna get us to the top in time for the second game?" One grunt, two growls and an epithet, and it's the same old Butch.

THE business of watching game. Reminds self again that this is a soft job. But careful not to say so for publication. Sees Mickey Cochrane get credit for a hit on Joe Kuhel's fumble and decides Detroit official scorers are next to Boston in home-townish decisions.

The business of writing the game. Damn those stock leads that keep cropping up in his mind! Tries to figure out a new angle. Runs hands through hair. Thinks he has the germ of an idea. Begins to write and hopes that it will get better as he goes along. Discovers he's written too much already.

Dinner at 8. Waiters, music, this is the life. Wonders what's on at the movies. Turns to theatrical page. Figures he can make W. C. Fields picture if he hurries. Wolfs his food, grabs his hat, streaks through lobby, is jostled roughly and knocked against pillar by some hulking fool who doesn't know enough to get out of the way. Recovers his hat and turns to look at his brutal assailant. It is a telegraph boy. Looks long and intently at the lad, and faintly recalls he has business with him. Eureka! Of course. There was a column to be written and filed tonight. Here 'tis.

Gallico With Baseball Throng Prays for Brawl on Diamond

By Paul Gallico,

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—There was one curiously enjoyable moment, right at the tail end of the first game of the New York Giants-St. Louis Cardinals doubleheader at the Polo Grounds today when it looked as though there might be a fight. Gus Mancuso and Dolly Stark, Giant catcher and National League umpire, respectively, had words, and began to push one another around. Lippy Durocher, of St. Louis, was at the plate at the time and, while he seemed to be taking no active part in the argument it looked through field glasses as though he would be pleased if the thing went further.

Inside of 15 seconds the members of both ball clubs were jammed around the plate, the three umpires, Stark, Klem and Stewart, were in the center, red-faced, sweating and jawing. But what I was getting at was that the vast, hot, cross, steamy crowd that jammed the park apparently would have been delighted had there been a general fight on the field and, I must say, so would I. . . .

Not that the majority of the customers would vote in favor of rowdyism, but it seems that when you are all hot and sticky, damp and uncomfortable, there is nothing quite as cooling and soothing, somehow, as seeing a couple of other guys having a fight. I am surprised that one was averted. Umpire Stark was ringing wet with perspiration. The back of his light gray suit was quite black with the drip of honest toil. He must have been very short-tempered and uncomfortable, and under those circumstances one forgives less quickly. However, there was suddenly so much milling around that no one thought to take a poke at any one until someone in the mob laughed, and it was too late.

At that moment a breeze sprang up and cooled fevered brows. Hubbel struck Durocher out a-swinging, and the Giants won a home-run-hitting competition by the score of 6 to 4, a much-needed game, and everybody on the field went to the showers. But it had been a very electric moment, sort of like waiting for the first flash of lightning after the storm clouds have gathered overhead. It's been a long time since there has been a good

Detroit Bats Around in 2 Innings

Greenberg, Goslin Also Star; Newsome, Hayes, Petit Pounded.

By Shirley Povich,

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, Aug. 14.—The Tigers nipped a ninth-inning rally by the Nats when Pinch Hitter Alan Strange hit into a double play and Washington fell 16 runs short of tying the score this afternoon.

Detroit won the ball game, 18 to 2, the Nats failing to share in a new high-scoring record for the season when Relief Pitcher Leon Pettit performed sensationally and held the Tigers to three runs in the last four innings. One more run and the Tigers would have topped the record high for the season, established when they beat the Browns, 18 to 0, a few weeks ago.

It was no slaughter of the innocents, Buck Newsom and J. Millard Hayes were as guilty as sin in those early innings, when pitching and ducking in the same motion, they presented the Tigers with a 15-to-1 lead before the fifth inning arrived.

Rowe's Thirteenth Victory.

The Tigers didn't trifle with Newsom and Hayes. They came up with six runs against Newsom in the second inning, and, by way of showing no favoritism, leaped upon Hayes for six runs in the fourth inning. Scoring thus in lots of half a dozen, the Tigers presented Schoolboy Rowe with his thirteenth pitching victory of the year and his fourth in succession.

Eleven thousand Detroit fans reveled in the proceedings, especially when the scoreboard showed Cleveland the winner over the Yankees, 7 to 6. The upshot of it all was that the Tigers restored to themselves the six-game lead they had held earlier in the week.

Rowe, who coasted into the finish with 14 runs to spare, was no drawback to the Tigers in the batters' box today, either. He contributed five straight hits to the 17-hit assault by the Tigers on Newsom, Hayes and Pettit, one a triple that figured in three runs.

Two Runs at Start.

The Tigers warmed up against Newsom with a two-run barrage in the first inning, inspired by Mickey Cochrane's triple to right field, and then they swung into action seriously in the second inning.

Those six runs in the second inning came about after two were out. The next seven hitters reached base with an assortment of hits, two walks and a hit batsman and Rowe found himself in possession of an 8-to-0 lead.

Facing Hayes in the third inning, the Tigers warmed up against him with a single run and then finished him off with six in the fourth. At one point during the inning, Hayes threw 12 straight balls into Cliff Bolton's mitt, which explains in a great measure how come the Tigers scored a half-dozen times on only four hits.

Two Tigers, Herman Clifton and Pete Fox, went hitless. That remains as the only mystery in connection with the game.

Nip and Tuck Game Won By Cleveland as Gomez Fails.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 14—The Yankees failed to overcome the combined jinx of Mel Harder's flinging and Lefty Gomez's inability to work as a relief hurler today, and the Indians pulled out a 7-to-6 victory in the ninth inning.

The Yanks, after getting only two hits in five frames, put the blast on Harder to tie the count in the eighth inning and go ahead in the ninth. In the home half of the inning Johnny Murphy passed Earl Averill and Joe Vosmik singled. That called Gomez into action and he walked Pinch Hitter Ralph Winegarner to cram the corners, then grooved one for O'Dell Hale. The "bad news" boy smacked it for a double to drive in two runs and win the game.

Virginia Beach Closes Dog Track for Season

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 14 (AP).—The dog-racing track of the Cavalier Kennel Club at Virginia Beach, storm center of five weeks controversy about the legality of its option selling system of playing the results, closed today for the rest of the season. Phil Skelton, builder and lessor, announced. The decision was reached at a conference of track executives this morning.

Technically, the track was closed pending the outcome of the appeals of two track employes who were convicted by Trial Justice E. V. Greeham of violating the State gaming laws by participating in option selling and buying at the track.

50,000 See Giants Divide With Cards

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The Cardinals and the Giants packed the Polo Grounds with thrills and people today, but after four and a half long hours of battle they wound up exactly where they started.

The Giants won the first game of the double-header, 6 to 4, and the Cards the second, 3 to 0, and the world champions were no better off than when they started the "crucial" five-game series, three full games behind the New York league leaders.

The second largest crowd of the season here, 50,868, saw the Giants maul Paul Dean, once a bogey man, for five runs on five hits in the first two innings of the opener, sewing away the duel when Joe Moore slapped a home run into the stands with two on in the second. Ed Heusser, a rookie right-hander, pitched the last six innings for the Cards, allowing but two hits, but it meant nothing more than a pretty exhibition as Carl Hubbell, Giants' screwball ace, eased along nicely behind his lead.

Hubbell allowed eight hits while the Giants were getting but seven, but the Cards were whamming for the balconies. In all there were five homers in the first match, Gus Mancuso getting the Giants' second; Terry Moore, Jack Rothrock and Pepper Martin sinking aces for the Cards.

Wild Bill Hallahan allowed ten hits in the second game while the Cards were nicking unlucky Clydel Castleman for five, but he hit the first home run of his long major league career in the second inning with none on, a looping fly that just reached the right field stands.

Hallahan had to be rescued in the ninth after he walked three to fill the bases with one out, bringing Paul Dean back into action as relief. Dean threw only two pitches, the first a ball, the second a curve that Dick Bartell whacked into a double play, ending the game.

Teams Scrappy.

The athletes scrapped bitterly all the way. Both teams crowded around the plate when Leo Durocher, Cards captain, started rubbing noses with Gus Mancuso, Giant catcher, but Hubbell ended that by fanning Durocher for the last out of the first game.

The crowd was the biggest since

Hambletonian Captured by Greyhound

By the Associated Press.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Breaking the hearts of his rivals with as great a stretch drive as ever was seen on an Americna track, Greyhound, an aptly named grey colt from E. J. Baker's St. Charles, Ill., barns, today lived up to prerace predictions as he won the $33,000 Hambletonian.

Odds-on-choice of a cosmopolitan crowd of nearly 40,000, drawn from the Park avenues, Broadways and farms, the speedy grey carried off the prize of $18,670 in two heats. It was the first time that the race had been won in straight heats since Walter Cox drove Walter Dear to victory in 1929.

For three-quarters of a mile in each heat, Greyhound, driven by Indianapolis' master reinsman, Sep Palin, appeared a beaten trotter. Then with the closing dash, for which he has been famous in winning five straight races this year and seven out of ten starts last season, the son of Guy Abbey jumped to the front and won much as he pleased.

Outsider Second.

With Palin holding a tight rein except for one brief period in the third quarter, Greyhound stepped over the first mile in 8:02¼ to beat Pedro Tipton, owned by H. Stacy Smith, of Newark, and driven by Will Hodson, by a half length. He came from ten lengths back at the half in what proved to be the final test to finish five length clear of Warwell Worthy, an outsider, carrying the silks of Henry E. Warwick, New Hamburg, N. Y., trotting the mile in 2:02¾.

The time for the first mile created a new winner's record for the event, previously held by Spencer at 2:02½, but failed by one second to equal the mark of 2:01¼ made by Hollywood Dennis in taking one heat from The Marchioness in 1932. With the victory worth $18,670, the triumph increased to $27,279.35 the earnings of a colt, which Baker, one of the two heirs to the John W. (Bet a Million) Gates fortune, purchased out of an Indianapolis auction for a mere $900 as a yearling.

Pedro Tipton and Warwell Worthy were forced to split second and third money, amounting to slightly more than $8,000, when the Smith colt could do no better than seventh in the final heat. The same position the latter placed in the opening brush.

Shields Beats Mangin in Thriller

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 14.—The thrills that the critical Newport Casino tennis gallery demands were supplied by Film Player Frank Shields today, when that top-seeded star put on a two-hour battle to qualify for the semi-finals with a 13—11, 6—3, 8—6 triumph over the persistent Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J.

Shields and Mangin opened by dropping their first services and both cracked again in the fifteenth and sixteenth games. As they fought on even terms both played sparkling tennis, with Shields putting on the pressure at every opportunity. His aggressive tactics started to bear fruit in the eighteenth game, when Mangin fought off set point six times.

Mangin Begins to Tire.

The longer the initial set went the higher Shields boosted his game against his steady foeman, who was playing the best tennis of his long career. Mangin started to tire when the game's total hit the 20 mark, and in the twenty-third with the count 30-all Shields whipped over two blistering service aces to run the count to 12—11.

Mangin tried to rally, but he dropped behind on service in the next game, and, after Shields got his twelfth set point the Jerseyite netted an easy volley to go down.

Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., third seeded, was the only other to reach the second last bracket, the same one Shields, his doubles partner, entered in the upper half of the draw. Parker had an easy session eliminating Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—1, 6—1.

Pitcher Blows Up After Verbal Clash Follows Cronin's Triple.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—A five-run attack against Ray Phelps gave the Boston Red Sox a second straight victory over the White Sox, 7 to 1, today and extended the Chicagoans' dismal August showing to one victory, a tie and 12 defeats.

With the score tied 1 to 1 in the seventh, Manager Joe Cronin tripled to right center and, after pulling up at third base, engaged in a verbal clash with Phelps. Umpire Bill Summers stepped between the pair to prevent them from coming to blows. Phelps, who had held Boston to three hits during the first seven innings, went to pieces after that.

Manor Mark To Houghton With 68

Walper Shoots 70 and Burnett Tops Class A Amateurs With 71.

By Dave Herman,

ENCOURAGED by a recent announcement that he had been made an automatic qualifier for the National P. G. A. championship, Al Houghton, Indian Spring professional, shot a brilliant 68, 2 under par, yesterday at Manor to set a new competitive course record and win first prize money in the professional sweepstakes sponsored by the Maryland State Golf Association.

Houghton was as straight as a string, did not have a single 3 putt green, and was off the fairway only three times. His score might easily have been 4 strokes lower had some of those 5 and 6 footers dropped into the cup instead of lipping it.

Beach Had Held Mark.

The Indian Spring pro's 68 clipped a stroke off the all-time competitive mark established by Ralph Beach, Suburban pro, in the 1933 National Open trials. Holders of the unofficial Manor records are Harry Pitt and Roger Peacock, who have scored 64s.

Houghton played with Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor; Dick Flynn and the writer. Between the two Houghton and Walper fired enough birdies to blow up a battleship. They scored a remarkable best ball of 62, 8 under par. Walper finished second in the professional event with his 34—36—70. Houghton had four birdies and Walper four.

The Indian Spring ace made a championship finish, slapping a lusty iron shot out of the rough from a bad lie to within 10 feet of the pin, and canning his putt for a birdie 3.

First prize in Class A of the amateurs went to Volney Burnett, Indian Spring golfer, who shot a 36—35—71. His 2 handicap also gave him the low net award, but

Maryland Golf Award To Houghton

Al Houghton, Indian Spring professional golfer, will be awarded a gold medal by the Maryland State Golf Association for winning the Maryland Open championship three consecutive times, it was learned last night.

The medal will be given Houghton in appropriate ceremonies at Rolling Road during the course of the $2,500 Calvert Open, which is the same as the Maryland Open.

From Houghton and Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range teacher, came the announcement that they would challenge any two-man team in this section for a match, with an attractive purse at stake.

Airy Heiress Wins First at Narragansett, Pays $226.50 Mutuel

2-Year-Old Tops Track Record

Card Featured by Long Shot Wins; Can't Remember Scores.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, R. I., Aug. 14.—Large payoffs in the first race and the daily double stole the spotlight from the Aquidneck Claiming Stakes, 6 furlongs, for 3-year-olds and upward, feature race of today's program, which was won by Mrs. A. M. Creech's Can't Remember. J. Badessa's Airy Heiress paid $226.50 for $2 straight ticket when she won the first race, 5½ furlongs, for 2-year-olds, and broke the New England record set by the late W. A. Axton's Monk's Star, of $209.50, made at Rockingham last season.

When the 30-to-1 shot, Mrs. T. J. Debord's Flashing Thru, won the third, 6 furlongs, for 3-year-olds and upward, a daily double price of $2,164.80 was reached. Only seven tickets were sold on this combination, the total double pool being $16,638.

Tops Large Field.

Can't Remember, a 4-year-old gelded son of Canter, scored his first triumph in New England this season, when he led the field of 11 in the Aquidneck.

Jockey Charley Stevenson had him out of the gate fast, and when Percy Pike's Indiantown and Mrs. M. J. White's All Forlorn challanged in the run down the back stretch, Can't Remember easily disposed of them, but then just to win from J. U. Gratton's Allen Z by a neck.

The latter moved on the outside through the turn and then responded to a vigorous ride by Carl Hanford, who used heel and hand on his mount to chase the leader. Indiantown was third.

The race was worth $2,695 to Can't Remember and brought his earnings for the year to approximately $7,500.

NRA Noses Out Investigation, 6-5, on 9th Inning "Boners"

Fly Allowed To Fall for Safe Hit

Scores Winning Tally; Barry Races Home as Mate Is Put Out.

THE NRA Blue Eagles, quick to capitalize on a couple of prize "bone-plays," nosed out the Bureau of Investigation Team, 6 to 5, yesterday before 3,500 fans to take the opener of the three-game series for the second-half Post Association title in the Government League.

The Investigation team (all except two players) stood by helplessly and watched a possible victory go to smash on the wings of a lazy pop fly, which Colley and Russell allowed to fall between them in an Alphonse-Gaston act, while Bill Rapp was racing across with the winning run.

Barry Scores Run.

George "Pepco" Barry had outdared Maurice "Gook" Taylor a few minutes previously to tie the score by dint of a fast dash from third to home while "Gook" was concentrating on tagging out Bozek in a run-down to second base. The bases were filled at the time, Barry, Bozek and Rapp having connected for singles in quick succession.

Johnny Bozek staked Lefty Stevens to a 4-3 advantage in the sixth with a lusty home run drive to the far side of the Ellipse but the Sleuths nullified this lead in their half of the seventh and went out in front by virtue of timely hits by Tennant and Fisher.

These teams meet again Friday on the Ellipse at 4 p. m.

Shepherd Is Hurt In Football Drill

Western Md. Star Suffers Black Eye, Shake-up.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Frank Sobrero, Santa Clara half back, and Bill Shepherd, of Western Maryland, the Nation's leading scorer last year, were injured today as the College All-Stars of 1934 went through a smashing scrimmage for their football battle August 29 against the Chicago Bears, professional team.

Sobrero suffered a possible shoulder fracture. Shepherd received a black eye and was banged up generally, although he will be in condition to play. Chuck Mucha, University of Washington guard, also was on the casualty list as the result of a collision with Bill Bevan, of Minnesota, in Monday's drill.

Scrimmage lasted an hour and a half with Charles Bachman, of Michigan State; Doc Spears, of Wisconsin, and "Slip" Madigan, of St. Marys, in charge.

Offer Is Low, So Goldstein Won't Box

Former College Champion Turns Down Offer of Stadium Bout.

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN, former intercollegiate lightweight boxing champion, returned unsigned a contract for his appearance against one Jimmy Fitzsimmons on the Police benefit card at Griffith Stadium September 30.

"Not enough money," averred Bobby in declining the bout. "I'd rather fight for nothing than that kind of money because I don't have to fight at all, but like to do it more or less as a hobby."

Goldstein had been offered the same terms as Fitzsimmons—$50 if he won, $30 if he lost. In returning the contract, the lad who first zoomed to national prominence as Southern Conference champion with the University of Virginia, said he would be glad to meet Fitzsimmons—for $250.

"The card will draw more than $25,000," Goldstein insisted. "If I'm not worth 1 per cent of the gross gate, then you don't want me on the card."

Bobby said yesterday he would leave the ring game to shift for itself for a few weeks while he became accustomed to a new position he has just accepted. Then he will start training and attempt to book bouts in the South and other spots where his tremendous popularity as a college boxer will make him a very good box office attraction.

Goldstein has fought two professional bouts, both here under the direction of his brother, Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker for Joe Turner. He won his first bout by a knockout in the first round and the second, against one George Levey, of New York, was declared "no contest" in the second round. Bobby was boxing Levey free to help the benefit show on which he appeared.

Hutchison Pitches Staunton to Victory

Hurler Continues Streak in Beating Harrisonburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 14.—Southpaw Robert Hutchison continued his brilliant hurling here last night as Harrisonburg took a Valley League contest from Staunton by a count of 4 to 1.

The run scored by Staunton was the first registered against Hutchison in three games as he blanked Orange and Front Royal previously. Hutchison allowed four hits, bringing the total to eight for his last three contests.

Hutchison had to be good as his teammates obtained only three hits off Via. The southpaw obtained two to bring the total to five. Both hurlers were given brilliant support and the game was fast.

Harrisonburg tallied all its runs in the sixth after Hutchison singled and was safe at second on an error. Rapp followed with a triple. Kibler was walked and then Bob Baker doubled to drive in the final two runs.

Cubs Downed, 9-5 and 3-2, By Dodgers

Late Rallies in Both Games Upset; Clark and Reis Stars on Mound.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 14.—The Dodgers straightened out one of the odd situations in the National League standing and wiped out several past defeats today when they bowled over the Cubs in both ends of a double-header, 9 to 5 and 3 to 2.

Watson Clark's fine relief hurling and a couple of late assaults on Larry French and Charley Root settled the first game.

After the Cubs had tied the night-cap twice, Brooklyn went ahead in the seventh on Joe Stripp's single, a fielder's choice, a bunt and a fly. Bobby Reis, the reformed infielder, protected that lead after Dazzy Vance nearly lost it in a relief role.

The defeat put the Cubs definitely back into third place, a half game behind St. Louis. Previously they had counted a half game ahead of the Cards, but trailed them on the percentages.

Company Spent $49,865 in War On Utility Bill

North American Co. Files Details With Senate Committee.

The North American Co. has filed with Senator Black, chairman of the special investigating committee of the United States Senate, a sworn answer to the Senate Committee's questionnaire, which shows the following expenditures in connection with the Wheeler-Rayburn public utility bills by all companies covered by such answer:

Traveling, hotel, printing, clerical, telephone and like expenses incurred in connection with assembling data for and presentation of statements on behalf of The North American Company	$ 2,312.84
Traveling and hotel expenses of J. F. Fogarty, president, as a member of committee of public utility executives	609.33
Payments for stenographic and photostat services rendered to committee of public utility executives at the committee's Washington office	785.56
Expenses of sending communications to security holders:
Printing	$ 9,786.53
Envelopes, office supplies, extra clerical services, etc.	4,529.42
Postage	15,031.62	29,347.57
Total direct disbursements		33,025.00
Payments by The North American Company to committee of public utility executives. (This committee has already filed with the Senate committee an audited statement of its receipts and disbursements.)		16,840.00
Total		$49,865.00

Commenting on the expenses, J. F. Fogarty, president, says:

"All of these costs were borne by the North American Co., with the exception of minor amounts paid by North American Edison Co. and Western Power Corporation. None was charged to or collected from any operating company.

"While the amount of the expense to which this company has been subjected as a result of the proposal to enact destructive legislation is substantial, it is appropriate to point out that it is equivalent to but slightly more than ½ cent for each outstanding share of common stock of the North American Co. The securities of the North American Co. and its subsidiaries are held by more than 150,000 investors, for the protection of whose property these expenditures were made."

Corn Is Stronger On Crop Doubts

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Suggestions that a crop scare in regard to the 1935 corn yield is not yet beyond bounds of possibility lent zest to grain dealings today.

From start to finish, the corn market showed independence, and refused to follow dips in quotations of wheat. Increasing complaints about corn crop drought reverses west of the Missouri river formed an outstanding source of trade anxiety, and to this was added uneasiness in some quarters as to danger that the crop as a whole might yet have to withstand the ill effects of an early frost.

Corn closed firm near the day's top level, ⅞@1⅜ above yesterday's finish, December, 56½@56⅝; wheat unchanged to ¼ up; December, 88¾@88⅞, oats, ⅛@½ off, and provisions showing 5 to 50 cents gain.

SEC Bars, Then Restores Stock In Baltimore

U. S. Fidelity Shares Are Temporary Victim of a Technicality.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 14.—Shares of the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co., which were ordered suspended from trading on the Baltimore Stock Exchange early today by the Securities and Exchange Commission, were reinstated and restored to trading within an hour and a half after the suspension, the stock exchange announced.

The original order for the suspension by the SEC was based on the failure of the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. to file technical amendments to its application for permanent registration within the time limit, Aug. 7, fixed by the commission. At the office of the company officials said that the matter had been caused by an unavoidable delay, the papers having failed to reach the commission until August 9.

Officials of the company went to Washington early today and shortly thereafter the exchange was advised that trading could be resumed in regular order.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Close With Firm Tone in Less Active Trading, With Rails and Electrics Favored; Cotton Rallies; Dollars Weaken.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 14.—Stocks passed through a rather desultory session, with the tone steady and prices irregular until the last hour, when a moderate rally took place. Bonds also were indifferent, with another slide in Government issues, and commodities were erratic. Wheat closed unchanged to slightly higher and cotton rallied.

Stock price movements were less exciting than they have been for more than a week, and the volume of trading failed to reach 2,000,000 shares. Public utilities again were leaders in the early trading, but their advance was halted. Rails also had their periods of strength, but they failed to capture enough tape reader interest to go beyond yesterday's advanced positions, except in a few instances.

Stocks in the drinking industry were harder. Owens Glass picked up 2½ points and the whisky shares were firmer. No sale of Coca-Cola had been reported up to the late trading. Canning stocks and the tins were stirred a little on steel trade reviews telling of larger tinplate orders. Farm implements were subdued, as were the mail order shares.

Electrics were strong. General Electric was a feature, pushing along to a new high price for the year. Interest in Telephone, Western Union and Radio flattened and motor stocks had to absorb further profit taking. Auburn was an exception, being bid up more than 2 points.

Dollar Weakens.

In the foreign exchanges sterling coptinued its advances, quite against the seasonal trend, and gold currencies followed. The dollar's persistent weakness is beginning to attract attention, and explanations offered seem inadequate. The price of silver in London, unchanged for weeks, has begun to drop on larger offerings from the Orient, which does not support current reports of Treasury buying. In other words, the pressure on dollars on account of silver purchasing does not just now seem to be excessive.

In conjunction with the weakness in dollars the Treasury bond market also has softened. It might be easy for the alarmists to make out a case of growing fright over the possibility of widespread inflation in this country. The unsound and amazing taxation proposals, the easy acceptance of pension bills by the Administration, total lack of any indication that spending merely for spending's sake is going to be curtailed this side of next year's elections, the exultation shown over passage of security legislation involving taxation in dizzy amounts, the indifference to a balanced budget, all give rise to anxiety. Those factors tend to hold down optimism that otherwise might be growing mightily with the improvement in business earnings and the strong share markets.

Summer Slack.

Midweek trade news contained no special stimulation for industrial stocks. The Iron Age, reviewing the steel and iron industry, noted a leveling off in output, but told of further advance in scrap prices. Miscellaneous demand, says the journal, remains the mainstay of the steel trade. Motor orders are now slack as the large factories are changing over to new models. The public reception of the new models doubtless will give color to autumn business in general.

Meanwhile the movement of goods over the railroad systems is not increasing. Freight car loadings for last week, as indicated by reports of leading carriers, were about 1½ per cent under the movement of the previous week and 2½ per cent lower than for the corresponding period of last year. This month is proving to be another unfavorable one for railroad earnings, but it is not indicative of as much slack in industrial activity as the loadings figures would seem to show. For one thing, more goods probably are moving by truck, in view of the higher freight rates; for another, the extraordinary movement of live stock last year, caused by the drought, makes for an unfavorable comparison.

Later in the season, if the recent expansion in the motor and steel industries is reflected as it should be by larger railroad traffic, the current liking of the market for railroad securities may turn out to have been justified.

Treasury Finance.

Bidding closed this afternoon on the Treasury's auction of $100,000,000 of 2⅛ per cent bonds. Since the price of the bonds dipped below 101 for the first time in a long period, prediction was general that neither the price nor the volume of bids would compare flatteringly with the last previous offering.

There was some talk that Government agencies, which did not seem to be supporting the market today, might put in some bids for the purpose of making the offering appear more successful than it actually proved to be.

Brokers' Loans.

Some brokers report a considerable increase in their loans over the past week; others say little change has taken place. At the moment the trading, aside from some motor business from Detroit, is said to be largely a matter of speculation among floor traders. Should brokers' loans rise this week the record would then be two successive weekly increases, for the first time in months.

Investigations.

Neither the Stock Exchange nor SEC likes to admit that inquiries are being carried on in any suspected stock juggling, nor will the Stock Exchange say much about the result of any inquiry. Every investigation is nevertheless known to many. No possible harm could come to stockholders from notice that inquiries are begun, and from publication of results. If only legitimate buying or selling were taking place it wouldn't stop because of an investigation, nor would the price of a stock be affected. If, on the other hand, a pool or an operator were doing some fancy work, that doubtless would stop, as it should, and furthermore some of the sucker public would stay out.

SEC Is Upheld In First Test Of Authority

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Complete approval of the sweeping victory scored by the Securities and Exchange Commission in the Jones royalty suit, in which the commission's constitutional right to require securities registration was under fire, was voiced in local financial circles yesterday.

In the first court decision since the securities act of 1934 went into effect, Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey, in the United States District Court of New York, denied a motion by J. Edward Jones to declare the securities registration provision of the act unconstitutional.

He ruled also that Jones, who is a dealer in oil royalties, could be subpenaed by the commission to appear before it in Washington at an inquiry to determine the value of the securities.

Judge Caffey upheld the provisions of the act calling for the registration of securities to be transported in interstate commerce and the provision that inquiry shall be held before the commission as to the value of the securities.

The court passed only upon those provisions of the act which related to the case before it and, noting the respondent, Jones, had attacked the enactment, set forth that in the court's opinion it would be impertinent for a jurist in his position to criticize the act or question the motives of the legislative body. The court declined to approve or disapprove the act.

Jones, in a public statement declared that he would appeal the verdict to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Caffey's order was hailed as fully vindicating the commission's position by John J. Burns, general counsel for the Federal body.

"The petition," wrote Judge Caffey in his decision, "is in conformity with the substantive provisions of the statute. I see no merit in the motion to strike out parts thereof. The registration statement (of Jones) was filed May 4, 1935.

More than 20 days have elapsed prior to counsel for the respondent interposing the procedural objections on which they now rely. No stop order has been issued by the commission. In consequence, by force of Section 8 of the securities act the statement became and continues to be effective unless terminated by the respondent's own acts.

"By the same token if the registration statement by still effective section 8 empowered the commission to take testimony concerning the statement, the commission, therefore, is entitled to have the respondent attend as a witness before it."

Fidelity Investment.

The Washington office of the Fidelity Investment Association and the affiliated Fidel Association of New York yesterday reported consolidated sales for the seven-month period ended July 31, 1935, of $17,236,000, as compared with $11,847,000 for the same period last year, an increase of more than 45 per cent.

Total business reported for the month of July, 1935, was approximately 24 per cent ahead of the $2,460,040 reported for June, 1935. Reserve investments of Fidel Association of New York, Inc., consisting of some 50 bond issues, were distributed by percentages as follows on July 31, 1935:

	Per cent
U. S. Government bonds	46.4
State and municipal bonds	13.9
Railroad bonds	18.1
Public utility bonds	9.8
Industrial bonds	12.0
Total	100.0

According to a statement by the Fidel Association's comptroller, a large percentage of Fidel's investments in high grade, long-term bonds selling at substantial premiums above cost were disposed of in recent months and funds reinvested in United States Government bonds pending a clarification of the outlook for the high-grade corporate bond market.

Machine Tool Orders Jump 31% in Month

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—Following sharp rises in both May and June, the index of machine tool orders, as compiled by the National Machine Tool Builders Association, in July advanced to 119.8, the highest since 1929, and an increase of 28.7 points or 31.5 per cent over the index figure of 91.1 in June.

Cotton Rallies $2 on Prospect Of 12-Cent Loan

Previously Market Had Made New Low for Season.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—A further decline in cotton was followed by a quick rally of about $2 a bale on Wall Street news ticker reports from Washington concerning crop loan prospects.

December contracts, after selling off to 10.66, shot up to 11.10, but met increased offerings at this level and closed at 10.98. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 10 to 20 points.

The market made new low ground for the earlier trading on reports of continued favorable crop progress and talk of the increasing movement. The sharp rebound followed appearance of the ticker report quoting Senator Bankhead as confident of the announcement of the 12 cent loan on the income cotton crop.

Turkey to Buy Telephone Unit

By the Associated Press.

Istanbul, Aug. 14.—The Turkish government today agreed to purchase the Anglo-American Istanbul Telephone Co. for $4,000,000 in 20 annual installments beginning in 1939.

The action was another step in President Kamal Ataturk's program of nationalization. The company will surrender its possession soon.

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—At the offices of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., which holds a minority interest in the Anglo-American Istanbul Telephone Co., it was said negotiations for the sale of the company to the Turkish government had been under way for about two months. Both French and British interests also hold ownership in the Istanbul organization, which was formerly known as the Constantinople Telephone Co.

Steel Output Rises 2 Points To 49 Per Cent

Production Is Now at Its Highest Level Since February.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—Steel production advanced 2 points this week to 49 per cent of capacity, Iron Age said today. It was the sixth consecutive weekly advance and brought output to the highest level since the third week in February, the publication says:

"Scrap prices continue to advance in various market centers and rises in heavy melting steel at Pittsburgh and Chicago have raised the Iron Age scrap composite from $11.83 to $12.08 a ton, its highest level since the second week in February," it was pointed out.

"Though there are indications of a leveling off of output at Pittsburgh, where operations are unchanged at 43 per cent, and at Cleveland and Buffalo, where ingot rates remain at 50 and 38 per cent, respectively, further gains were made elsewhere.

"Recent expansion in steel mill operations has occurred in the face of diminished releases from the automobile industry.

"Miscellaneous demand remains the mainstay of the current rise in steel production. Railroad buying is disappointingly light.

"Though most producers are understood to be preparing to announce fourth-quarter prices about August 21, they will probably not file them with the American Iron & Steel Institute, as was the practice under the code," the survey concluded.

Harvester to Expand Motor Truck Plant

Chicago, Aug. 14.—A $1,750,000 expansion program has been authorized by the International Harvester Co. to enlarge the capacity of its two motor truck plants located at Fort Wayne, Ind., and Springfield, Ohio.

Optimism over the future of truck sales, combined with the proportions of the current demand for its motor trucks, was given by International Harvester officials as reasons for the contemplated plant expansion.

Electrical Equipment Sales Make Big Gain

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—New orders booked by the electrical equipment manufacturers for the second quarter amounted to $134,586,216, the best quarterly showing since the second three months of 1931, when orders totaled $181,347,794, Standard Statistics, Inc., said today. For the first three months of 1935 bookings totaled $121,814,000.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

"I TELL you that line is no good! You sold me 250 yards of linen line for $4.50 and look at it now—all untwisted, and for its tested strength it won't hold a medium-size croaker. Why, the first time I used it and hooked a bluefish the line absolutely broke and after fastening on another drone and getting another strike it broke again. Either I get my money back or a new line, otherwise I'll buy my lines elsewhere."

The clerk looks at the distracted angler and with an effort holds back a smile and waits until the fellow is through finding fault. Usually he tries to explain why the line untwisted and why it broke under less pull than the tested strength, but the angler is so worked up over his misfortune that the dealer hands him either his money back or a new line free.

This column today is devoted to the fellow that is having trouble with his lines. During the past week many lines have been broken and unravelled on Southwest Middles by big bluefish and their owners never stopped to figure out why, and immediately rushed to the tackle store and set up a howl.

Twisted lines especially catch a lot of grief, no mistake about that. The angler will troll with it improperly, take out the twist, and complain. Now, regardless of how cheap a line (twisted) may be that twist is put there to stay. It does not add to the cost of producing a line to put a decent twist into it at the factory. This twist is achieved in such a manner that it would be next to impossible to put the twist in wrong—even on purpose. In a hand-laid line a manufacturer would be foolish to let a poorly twisted line leave his plant. Every inch of the line is directly under the eyes and in the hands of the person twisting it.

On machine-made lines the twist is accomplished by means of spindles. In order to get the line down to the proper size, without which it would fail to fit the spools onto which it is run, it must pass through these spindles. The last spindle through which the line passes revolves at a tremendous rate of speed and the line is carried and twisted. An operator stands at each spindle and watches every inch of the line as it comes through. The spindle cannot stop without throwing the whole machine out. The operator standing at the spindle is only one of many observers.

When one is trolling, a sharp lookout should be kept on the line to see that it is not twisted or untwisting. If your drone or lure is turning over, it is not riding correctly and will affect the twist in your line. Swivels, of course, are a help in all cases, but they are not a preventive. You can use six of them on your line and still untwist your line. The proper rig for trolling is one that will not allow your bait to revolve. If it does revolve, take notice of it before your line untwists too badly and reel in and remove your lure, swivels, etc. Then trail the bare line behind the boat while it is in motion. Unless badly untwisted the line will in a few minutes regain its natural twist. Some dealers carry a device that will twist or untwist a line. They are not expensive and well worth owning.

A line that is neglected will not give you good service. Never leave your wet line on your reel (especially if used in salt water) or leave the reel wet. Run your line off and dry in the shade. Dry your reel carefully, polish, oil and grease it. Wash your rod in clean water and dry carefully. Salt water eats into the very best varnishes, and no matter what you spend for a rod it will not stand up unless taken care of properly. Varnish it at the end of the season with regular rod varnish, not the household kind. Several rods can be varnished from a 25-cent can on sale at most sporting goods stores. The angler who returns to the dealer an item of tackle that has been ruined by the angler's own abuse is a poor sport and does so because he knows the dealer will come through with new merchandise gratis and does not consider the fact that the dealer has his number when he walks out the door thinking he put one over without the dealer being wise to his poor sportsmanship.

We are sorry to learn of our good friend, Capt. Bob Pritchett, of Herring Bay, arriving at Sibley Hospital yesterday, where he will undergo an operation for the removal of his appendix. Mrs. Bob says that his boats will continue in service and in the hands of capable guides. The captain advised the writer of blues caught yesterday in Herring Bay weighing up to 6 pounds. We all hope Bob will have a speedy recovery and return soon to his home near Galesville, Md.

Fishing at Solomons seems to be confined to the early morning and late into the evening. Day fishing has slacked off considerably judging from reports of yesterday.

Culbertson on Bridge

Evading the Throw-In.

The Bridge player who has sufficient foresight to free himself from the threat of a throw-in play is fortunate in his skill and deserves to win. He usually does win, which is one of the finest features in Contract Bridge. The greatest of players can well afford to be envious of North's excellent defense in the deal below:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 10 9 7 6 3 ♡ 6 2 ◇ K 8 ♣ A K 9 5
♠ A K ♡ Q J 9 8 4 ◇ 10 6 4 ♣ Q 6 2	W E S	♠ J 5 4 ♡ A K 7 2 ◇ A 7 5 2 ♣ J 3
	♠ Q 8 2 ♡ 10 5 ◇ Q J 9 3 ♣ 10 8 7 4

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
Pass	1♡(1)	Pass(2)	3♡(3)
4♡(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—This hand is slightly below the requirements for an opening bid of one, which ordinarily requires three honor-tricks, unless the suit is rebiddable. Having a five-card major suit and the majority of his remaining strength in spades, West stretched the point and was correct in doing so.

2—North could have overcalled with one spade and not have had any serious fear of being doubled. The good player, however, refrains from close overcalls such as this, particularly since they are all too likely to bring forth a disastrous opening lead from South in case East should play the hand.

3—East's distribution is not ideal for play in a suit, but he has no alternative since no other response would adequately express the strength of his hand. A double raise is forcing to game and West has no choice but to rebid.

The Play.

North opened the King of clubs, dummy playing the three and South the four. West false-carded with the club six, but North was not deceived and shifted to the ten of spades. This West won, leading his little club and North had to take with the Ace or lose it. Another spade was led through the Jack, forcing out West's King.

West then made a play which was part of a deep-laid plot to steal the game. Instead of drawing trumps he immediately led a diamond. If North had played low on this, as would so many players, four hearts could have been made. West would have taken two rounds of trumps, ruffed dummy's Jack of spades, cashed the Queen of clubs and thrown out a little diamond. This North would have been forced to win with his King, and being left with only spades and clubs, he could not have avoided allowing West to ruff the next lead in dummy and discard his last losing diamond.

North foresaw this sequence of plays just as well as West, and he was not to be trapped. When West led the low diamond, North promptly put up the King. He knew that this might cause him never to take a trick with this card, but his was but a choice of deaths. By holding the diamond King, he would have been thrown in, as I explained above. By giving up the diamond King he would unblock the suit in case South held the Queen and Jack. North received the reward of virtue. West could no longer throw in, and after the club and spade suits had been cleared, West had to concede two diamond tricks in South. Discarding one of dummy's diamonds on the Queen of clubs did not help. The two clubs and two diamonds gave North and South the four tricks they needed to defeat the contract.

On The Air Today

It wasn't so long ago that "Thursday—the big radio night"—was a common expression among radio listeners. Reference was made to the Vallee-Show Boat-Whiteman combination filling three consecutive hours of WRC's evening schedule.

Not only has that expression been out of circulation for some time but the Sunday Post preference poll treated at least two of the three features roughly indeed. Vallee showed up very poorly, the Show Boat was eighth or ninth in the list, and Whiteman's show was out of the picture.

Yet Thursday night draws its shares of listeners and I've been wondering why the old tried and true combination should have weakened in public acceptance.

For example, competing with Vallee for the listener's ear is Kate Smilth at WJSV, and Nickelodeon and the G. W. University program at WMAL. Opposite Show Boat, are two quarter-hours and Marty May at WJSV, and Death Valley Days and Goldman's Band at WMAL. And competing with Whiteman are the NBC Symphony at WMAL, and Heidt's Brigadiers and two quarter-hours at WJSV.

• • • •

It is a matter of regret that Washington's own daughter, Kate, showed up dismally on the poll. The Nickelodeon, Marty May and Goldman's Band showed less than even average listener interest. Death Valley Days has a following but it's small. A new competition, of course, comes from WOL, now being supplied regularly with New York features from the Inter-City net. However, these features were not average in representation on the poll.

There remains only the possibility that the NBC Symphony is stealing a fair share of Whiteman's audience. And as large a following as the symphonies are receiving, I can not believe that one is proving so popular as to virtually eliminate the "king of jazz' from the list.

• • • •

The situation becomes more perplexing in the light of variety offered in this three-hour stretch. Tonight Vallee offers Henry Hull, star of "Tobacco Road," and other stage successes, and Fred Perry, king of the world tennis domain. In addition, Bobby Burns, the Arkansas bazookah tooter; the Stewart Sisters, Howard and Shelton and the Charioteers. A typical Vallee variety show.

Show Boat presents a radio adaptation of "The Connecticut Yankee" with its excellent music and Lanny Ross' singing. Also Conrad Thibault, Molasses 'n' January and others of the troupe.

Whiteman's Music Hall program is not available in detail, but Helen Jepson, Ramona, the King's Men and others of the Whiteman show have been providing a balanced, well-rounded hour of music.

Tuesday night I waited with bated breath to see how Old Grandpa N. B. C. would pronounce "Caribbean" in the "Morgan Sails the Caribbean" program. Those who pronounce it with the accent on the second syllable, giving it a "rib" sound, lost to the old-fashioned school of pronunciation in which third syllable is accented thus, "bee," the way it was when you took eighth-grade geography.

• • • •

The incident Tuesday night, however, which helped revive my faith and interest in the human element in radio broadcasting was the deplorable situation in which the announcer on the Eddie Duchin auditions on the West Coast found himself. He got a frog in his throat. He sounded like it. He acted just as anyone else would in such a predicament. Finally he paused and cleared his throat—a perfectly normal and understandable operation. No doubt the big-wigs have shuddered twice over at such unbecoming behavior on the air, but I rather liked it. For the first time in months I was permitted to realize that a network announcer is a human being and not a phonograph record.

Mexican and Cuban dances, the United States Army Band, a series of scenes of pan American countries entitled "Glimpses of the Other Americas"—all these will go to make up the fifteenth annual Pan-American Summer Festival to be presented tonight at the National Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument.

Julian J. Zier, of the Pan American Union; H. Gerald Smith, and Paul W. Murphy have charge of arrangements for the festival. The program starts at 8:15 with a concert of pan-American music. Marion Chace and four members of her dance group will provide the dances, while Senorita Rosalmira Colomo and Mrs. Mildred Colvin, who is a niece of Commissioner Hazen, will be the soloists of the evening.

FLOOR SAMPLE PIANOS

Our large fall stocks will be in shortly and we must make room, so we're closing out our floor samples at big reductions. These instruments are in new condition and carry our new guarantee. All are the latest models and most are among the most popular styles. Listed below are a few of the values:

$250—Apartment Upright. Walnut case designed in the popular plain style. The mechanism is the same as is in the $225 instrument, but the case is slightly heavier.

$295—Baby Grand. Colonial style case finished in blended mahogany. This instrument has been slightly used, but we don't believe it can be told from new. Very unusual at this low price.

$395—Louis XV Period Model Baby Grand. Finished in a beautiful butt walnut. Regularly priced much higher. Good grands of this type are seldom found at anywhere near this price.

$495—Here's a Baby Grand that is regularly priced at $795, but it is the last we have of this model; we've cut the price deep to close it out quickly. Very sturdily built; its tone qualities and handsome appearance make it an instrument any one would be proud to own. A very popular style, too, plain case finished in a lustrous mahogany.

FLOOR SAMPLE PIANOS

Our large fall stocks will be in shortly and we must make room, so we're closing out our floor samples at big reductions. These instruments are in new condition and carry our new guarantee. All are the latest models and most are among the most popular styles. Listed below are a few of the values:

$225—Apartment Upright. Plain mahogany case with a full keyboard. Has a deep, rich tone for its size. A beautiful instrument and an unusual value at $225. One of the most popular apartment models we've ever handled.

$250—Apartment Upright. Walnut case designed in the popular plain style. The mechanism is the same as is in the $225 instrument, but the case is slightly heavier.

$295—Baby Grand. Colonial style case finished in blended mahogany. This instrument has been slightly used, but we don't believe it can be told from new. Very unusual at this low price.

$395—Louis XV Period Model Baby Grand. Finished in a beautiful butt walnut. Regularly priced much higher. Good grands of this type are seldom found at anywhere near this price.

$495—In the better piano class we have a beautiful little Baby Grand, one of the best selling models in our store, that at this price is an unusual value. The case design is the modern, straight line style, the finish mahogany. A really fine instrument.

$495—Here's a Baby Grand that is regularly priced at $795, but it is the last we have of this model; we've cut the price deep to close it out quickly. Very sturdily built; its tone qualities and handsome appearance make it an instrument any one would be proud to own. A very popular style, too, plain case finished in a lustrous mahogany.
